Stirred by reports that the Italian government has notified Greece it will ignore the league of nations' decision on their dispute and that Italy's representative at Geneva has been instructed to abstain from discussing the matter there, Great Britain has announced that she will give every ounce of her support to the league.
Should the league fail, it has been hinted that Great Britain is prepared to take some other action to settle the controversy.

Greece, however, has accepted the jurisdiction of the inter-allied council of ambassadors in addition to the league of nations and Paris anticipates that the Rome government will also heed the ambassadorial decrees.
If there are any.

Although Greeks attacked the Italian legation in Athens today, quietness prevails over the remainder of the Hellenic kingdom, including the Italian occupied island of Corfu. The Italian government has denied that it is occupying the island of Samos but it has neither confirmed or denied reports that it is holding the Ionian islands of Paxos, Antipaxos and Cephalonis.

CORFU IS ZONED
BY ROMAN INVADERS.

Rome, September 3.—(By the Associated Press.)—New precautionary arrests have been made on the island of Corfu by the Italians occupying forces and the governor has divided the island into zones which are presided over by the military.

The consuls of foreign governments resident in Corfu were informed today by the governor that merchandise on boats in Corfu before the Italian occupation began, and from those boats which the Italians have permitted to dock, excepting those of Greece, might be unloaded.

been held in the Catholic Cathedral for the victims of the Corfu bomb-

Beauty Is Pageant-Bound In Effort To Gain Crown

"WILL TRY TO WIN," MISS ATLANTA PLEDGES

BY LOYD A. WILHOIT
Constitution Staff Correspondent.
On Board Southern Railway Train
En Route to Atlantic City, September 3.—(Special.)—"Goodbye, everybody; we'll do our level best to win!"
These were the last words of Miss Frances Thayer, 17-year-old blonde beauty of 132 Park drive, as our train pulled out of the Brookwood station this afternoon amid a general fluttering of handkerchiefs and cries of good luck and Godspeed.

And now that Atlanta is a hundred or so miles to the south and the fast Southern train is thundering onward to Washington and Atlantic City,
"Miss Atlanta" is just as firm as ever in her determination to do everything in her power to win the coveted title of "Miss America" in the National Beauty tournament.

She seemed to be highly gratified that a large number of her friends and admirers gathered at the station to see her off, and she laughed heartily when informed of the fact that photographers almost found it impossible to get pictures of her departure.

BUSINESS CEASES
AS ATLANTA PAYS TRIBUTE TO LABOR

Thousands Line Streets
Despite Indications of Rain to See Most Colorful Parade of Year.

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN.

Atlanta with all America celebrated Monday as the day consecrated to the nobility of the new world-labor. The pounding stamp mills of Alaska were silent, the needle shops of Gotham were deserted, not a man was to be seen at the blast furnaces of Pittsburgh and the busy cotton mills of Georgia were empty, all activity was halted.

The colossal of labor folded his mighty arms and the wheels of industry stopped turning. It was the annual tribute of a continent to past achievements of the man who carries the burden and for a few hours labor surveyed the conquests of the future, which will be the conquests of peace.

For 24 hours labor rested, looked about, made merry and felt contented.
For although the skies of other countries are darkened with ominous clouds and the dreadful ghost of unemployment stalks over the land elsewhere, American labor basks in the sunshine of prosperity and happiness.

Hosts of Labor March.
With unfurled banners and lively music the hosts of labor marched through Atlanta's streets Monday.
Colorful pageantry, flags, bunting, streamers, all went to make the labor demonstration the greatest ever staged on the streets of Atlanta. Thousands of people lined the route of procession and the drizzling rain of the morning did not dampen the enthusiasm of either spectators or marchers.

As the bands played and the parade got under way, the sun reappear-ed and smiled with Georgian brilliance on the marching columns. Every unit of the local trades federation was in line. Boilermakers and engineers, mail carriers and carpenters, painters and bricklayers, a magnificent host, an army greater than the legions of Mars, for their work are the aims of peace, their destiny the building of a greater nation.

Interpersed with the marching ranks came the floats, tastefully decorated and emblematic of the type of activity of the workers immediately behind. Following the grand marshal of the parade, William Strauss, came the float of the Atlanta Federation of Trades and then the floats of the musicians, the garment workers, the blacksmiths, the sign painters, the stone cutters and the moving picture operators.

Employees of the Georgia Railway and Power company had struck upon a happy idea and the miniature street car was the greatest attraction of the parade. On the street car stood "the drum," the "largest drum in the world" and the street car was operated by a crew of one man and two children.

Sun Smiles Forth.
Although at first it looked as if the parade was to be abandoned, and the work of months of preparations to go for naught, suddenly the aspect changed, the sun came through the clouds, the bands played "Dixie" and new energy and ambition came over the marchers.

No less than five brass bands enlivened the step of the passing col-

Official steps toward relieving the fire danger at girls' high school cannot be taken soon enough to make them effective before the opening of the school, September 10, it became certain Monday after general council had adopted the Ragsdale resolution appropriating $1,000, which will cost to make the changes. The administrative board can not concur in the resolution until its regular meeting Thursday. It will then have to be signed by the mayor and the work advised for bids which must be accepted by council at another meeting.

The safety improvements, involving a change in the electric wiring, can be made, it was said, while school is in session without causing serious interruption to school work. Other safety measures have already been taken in anticipation of the opening of school. The fight for making the building safe was led by members of the woman's club and Parent-Teacher association.

Defeat Night Court Plan.
Council defeated the police committee night court proposal after it was reported with an unfavorable recommendation from the ordinance committee. The ordinance provided for two additional clerks for recorder's court and the promotion of the present clerk to be night judge. The purpose of the measure was to relieve the congestion now existing in police court. The police committee, it was stated, will prepare another measure looking toward establishment of a night court.

The gift of a small tract of land for park purposes between Albion, Copenhill and Washita avenues from the Copenhill Land corporation was accepted by council.

The mayor's veto of a measure creating a sidewalk inspector was sustained by council.

The Uncle Remus Memorial association was given permission to sell tags on the streets on September 24, to raise funds for the memorial fund.

Dispute Is Ended.
An ordinance by Councilman Fred
C. Woodall, of the third ward, making six months instead of one year the minimum service requirement before the city employee will be entitled to a vacation was adopted.

The J. R. Owens' case in the water works department, involving a dispute between a former employee and J.
R. Owens, one of the foremen, was closed officially by action of council, in tabling a resolution to have the case investigated by a special committee. The water works committee sustained Mr. Owens.

A resolution was adopted to furnish office space for national headquarters of the United Spanish War veterans in case R. L. Henry, of Atlanta, is elected national commander.

CHICAGO TO GET

ASSERTS UPHAM

New York, September 3.—(By the Associated Press.)—Frederick W.
Uppham, treasurer of the national Republican committee, returning today on the Leviathan from a trip abroad, said there was no question but that Chicago would be the scene of the 1924 Republican convention. A majority of the members of the committee had expressed themselves in favor of Chicago, he said.

San Francisco, which Mr. Uppham said had "a powerful bid" for the convention, "wouldn't have a chance,"
he declared, "unless President Coolidge expressed a desire to have the session held elsewhere than at Chicago."

FARMER KILLS WIFE

Franklin, Tenn., September 3.— Ezekiel Davis, a tenant farmer, shot and instantly killed his wife at the home of her father, Marshall Robertson, near Southall, this county, at 7 o'clock this morning and then turned the weapon, a single barrel shotgun, on himself, sending a charge into his left breast.

Davis was considered in a doting condition, when started to a hospital in Nashville. Domestic trouble is said to have caused the tragedy.

CENTRAL PARK COM.

President Coolidge Appeals
To American People for Aid

Washington September 3.—An appeal to the American people to contribute to the relief of the people of Japan was issued today by President Coolidge.

The American Red Cross was designated as the organization to which relief contributions should be transmitted.
Immediately after the president's proclamation was made public the American Red Cross announced that it had started a relief fund with a contribution of $100,000. In addition, it has appropriated its reserve funds, $10,000, for the assistance of Americans in the disaster zone.

The text of the proclamation follows:
"To the people of the United States:
"An overwhelming disaster has overtaken the people of the friendly nation of Japan. While its extent has not as yet been officially reported, enough is shown to justify the statement that the cities of Tokio and Yokohama and surrounding towns and villages have been largely if not completely destroyed by earthquake, fire and flood, with a resultant appalling loss of life and destitution and distress, requiring measures of urgent relief.

"Such assistance as is within the means of the executive department of the government will be rendered; but realizing the great suffering which now needs relief and will need relief for days to come, I am prompted to appeal urgently to the American people whose sympathies have always been so comprehensive to contribute in aiding the unfortunate and in giving relief to the people of Japan.

"In order that the utmost co-ordination and effectiveness in the administration of the relief funds be obtained, I recommend that all contributions, clearly designated, be sent to the chairman of the American National Red Cross at Washington or to any of the local Red Cross chapters for transmission to Japan."

MATADOR'S SWORD

Bayonne, France, September 3.—
During a bull fight in the local ring yesterday, Matador Antonio Marquez was giving a third blow to the bull, when the animal abruptly raised its head and tossed the sword among the spectators. The weapon struck Carlos Aguirre, a wealthy Cuban, in the heart. Aguirre was taken to a hospital, but died a few minutes after his arrival.

DAM ALIEN FLOOD IS DAVIS' ADVICE

Selective Immigration by United States, Not Europe, Is Burden of His Speech.

Birmingham, Ala., September 3.—
James J. Davis, secretary of labor, was the principal speaker at Birmingham's Labor day celebration.
Addressing 3,000 citizens, the secretary devoted his talk principally to immigration.

"There should be some immigration of the right kind," he said, "but we,
not Europe, will say who shall come,
or by God we will not let any come."
Referring to seven classifications of immigrants—very superior, superior, average, average, low average, inferior and very inferior—he said that after a check on 14,000,000 immigrants that came to this country it was found that 8,000,000 were of the last three classifications.

Referring to the late President Harding, Secretary Davis said: "We are gathered here this Labor day in peace and prosperity, with but one great loss to shadow our happiness, the loss of our great friend, Warren
G. Harding.

"It was one of the saddest hours of my life when he asked me to come with him to Birmingham and I found I could not do it. It was his hand that shaped the way to the ending of the 12-hour day. He was the only president in American history who had the courage to stand up against the great interests. He signed the bill that has kept the countless hours from your job."

In reference to wages, Secretary
Davis declared that the workers must be kept high enough for comfort, for schooling of children and the needs of home.
"What is life for any of us if the income is insufficient for necessities and some time to spend with the family?" he asked.

QUAKE DISASTER
FORETOLD BY JAP
IN MAY OF 1922

The earthquake disaster which has swept eastern-central Japan was propheied in May, 1922, by Dr. S.
Omori, head of the earthquake research department at Tokio Imperial university and one of the world's foremost authorities on the seismograph.

"The Tokio district may be visited by an earthquake next year that will be far worse than the disaster of 1855, which killed about 1,200 people," Dr. Omori told newspapermen at that time.

"If it does not come then it will come at the end of one of the following five-year periods within the next 30 years," he declared.

Dr. Omori exhibited a map showing the center of every earthquake recorded since the invention of the seismograph. This map tended to prove that upheavals of the earth's crust were most severe at the end of five to six-year cycles and that the center of the earth's tremors, which traveled away from Tokio after the disaster of 1855, had swung around, forming a circle, and were getting nearer to the city every year.

WHIRLWIND DRIVE TO CLOSE FIGHT FOR BONDS TODAY

New Assurances of Support for Movement Given by Large Tax Payers and by Civic Leaders.

COMMITTEE REPLIES TO WOMEN VOTERS

Shows Needs of Parks for City—Leaders in Campaign Express Confidence Bonds Will Carry.

With a detailed reply to the criticism launched at the $2,000,000 park bond proposal by a group of women voters, and new assurances of support for the park movement from large taxpayers and from civic leaders, the park bonds campaign committee prepared Monday night for a final whirlwind drive today to carry the bonds over by a substantial majority in the election Wednesday.

The resolution of the group of women voters, carried in The Constitution last Thursday, has been the only opposition to the park bonds that has been expressed publicly during the campaign and the park committee, headed by M. C. Kiser and Levi Reeves, asserted in issuing its card that those criticisms had been fully answered.

Two Polls in Each Ward.
Two polling places in each ward, announced in Sunday's Constitution, and which will be repeated in Wednesday morning's paper for the information of voters just before the election, will open at 7 o'clock Wednesday morning.

"The majority of the voters of Atlanta are in favor of park bonds," Mr. Reeves declared, "and the only possibility that we can see tonight for them is a sweeping victory. Given fair weather and a heavy vote and Atlanta will have within another year a system of parks, play grounds and breathing spaces equal to that of any other city in America."

The report of the registrar Monday was that 17,000 people had qualified to vote in the bond election up to that time. A majority of that number must vote on the bond issue and two-thirds of those voting must vote in favor of bonds in order to carry the election.

Reply of Committee.
The reply of the park campaign committee to the women voters' criticism and letters of indorsement of the program follows:

To the Voters of Atlanta:
Replying to resolutions recently published and signed by a group of women voters, the campaign committee for the Central park bond issue wishes to acknowledge it to be a fact, which we have many times stated, that no single parcel of land in the proposed park site has either been secured by option or purchased in the interest of the city. This leaves the purchase of this property to be made through the regular departments constituted by the municipality after the land has been appraised by members of the Atlanta Real Estate board.

Had the members of this committee sought options on this property, or had anyone connected with the project purchased the land in the interest of the city, it is a well known fact that a storm of protest would have resulted and charges would have been made that private realty dealers were seeking to make a profit through the transaction. We preferred to allow the entire transaction to be consummated through the regular channels, out in the open, where every citizen of Atlanta might know and see what was being done.

We are assured by signed communications from several of the principal owners of property in the proposed park site that they are not only in favor of the project, but that they are more than willing to sell their holdings to the municipality at a reasonable price. This was explained to this same group of ladies at their meeting August 23.

No Exact Price Given.
We do not recall anyone having made a statement as to the exact amount that would have to be paid for this property, this committee having on one or more occasions given an opinion that the property would cost the city "something like $750,- 000, leaving something over with which to improve the property for park purposes."

Disaster Is the Worst in Japan's Long History of Like Catastrophes, Says Island Dispatch.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
Osaka, September 4.—Almost the whole of Tokio and Yokohama have been destroyed by earthquake, followed by fire, and the loss of life now is estimated at from 120,000 to 200,000, or more.

Two hundred thousand houses have been burned down in the two cities.
Water mains have been broken and food supplies destroyed by the fire so that the people are near starvation and suffering much from thirst.

It is reported, but not confirmed that the section of Tokio where most of its foreign population resided is not greatly damaged.

Kobe, Japan, September 4.—Great destruction and loss of life has resulted from the earthquake which Saturday struck Japan the most severe blow received in her history. Both Tokio and Yokohama are reported to be virtually in ruins, hundreds of cities and towns on the Izu peninsula have been leveled by fire and quake, and the dead at the present time cannot be estimated.

Yokohama is completely isolated and is declared to have been burned or is burning. It is learned that the chief of police of Yokohama sent a wireless message to Osaka appealing for help and declaring that "Yokohama is a sea of flames."

The city of Kobe was shaken by the tremors and Toyama was affected.
The shocks, according to reports here, seemed to have centered in the Izu peninsula.

The United States consul at Kobe, immediately upon the receipt of word of the disaster, commanded the shipping board steamer West Orana, loaded it with food supplies and despatched it to Yokohama for the purpose of relieving the distress which is believed to be prevalent in the foreign community of the stricken city.

It is stated that all of the Tokio newspapers were destroyed with the exception of the Nichi Nichi and the Hochi. The resorts of Miyazobita and Hakone, noted for their hot springs, were wiped out. Refugees arriving from Hakone report many deaths in the vicinity of this resort.
There has been no news whatever from Miyazobita as it is feared the casualties there are heavy. Hakone is much frequented by foreigners.

Rail Line Reopened.
There is the greatest anxiety here in regard to the large foreign settlement at Yokohama, but no names of those who lost their lives or were injured have been received. It is feared the death toll was heavy in the settlement. A Japanese steamer in Tokyo harbor wireless that the city was unrecognizable.

Railway communication with Tokio is reported to have been restored to within seven miles of the city although Yokohama appears to be isolated. Because of the fire the ships which survived the tidal wave are

San Francisco, September 3.—A cablegram from Shichitaro Yada, Japanese consul general at Shanghai, to Ujio Oyama, Japanese consul general here was made public today by Mr. Oyama.

"About 1,000,000 are homeless and approximately 100,000 are dead and injured," the message said. "In the district of Yokohama and Hakone, great damage and loss of life is reported."

The homeless are being cared for by the Japanese relief office for sufferers."

ITALIAN AND FRENCH EMBASSIES DESTROYED.

Osaka, September 3.—(By the Associated Press.)—The Italian and French embassies in Tokyo were destroyed by the earthquake. This information is given in a late wireless message from that city.

KOREA MARU WEATHERS RUIN IN JAP HARBOR.

San Francisco, September 3.—The Toyo Kisen Kaisha steamer Korea Maru is safe in the harbor of Yokohama, with 2,500 refugees on board, according to cablegram received at the company's offices here today from its agents in Kobe. Communications of all kinds have been reopened up to Numazu, 85 miles west of Tokyo, the cablegram said.

The Korea was in the harbor throughout the beginning of the disaster period and was at once made available for relief purposes. She was to have sailed for San Francisco yesterday, but the sailing has been indefinitely postponed.

The cablegram said that Tokyo and Yokohama "have been destroyed."

JAPAN'S LEADERS REPORTED KILLED.

Osaka, September 3.—(By the Associated Press.)—It is reported that Viscount Takahashi, former premier, and twenty other leading members of the seiyukai, or government party, were killed on Saturday while holding a conference.

A representative of the Osaka Tiji Shimpō met a number of destitute foreigners at Hakone, who stated that about forty foreigners had perished there.

from the earthquake and fire in Tokyo alone at 150,000.

ANOTHER STRONG QUAKE RECORDED.

Florence, Italy, September 3.—(1:15, by the Associated Press.)—Seismic instruments here have recorded another strong and distant earthquake. It is not yet possible to ascertain the distance of the tremors as the record was made in a special form on the instruments.

TOKIO REPORTED STILL BURNING.

Nagasaki, September 3.—(By the Associated Press.)—Tokyo is still burning, according to advices received here today.

The offices of the Bank of Japan are reported to have been demolished yesterday.

CANADIAN PACIFIC OFFICE DESTROYED.

Hongkong, September 3.—An interrupted wireless message received here reports that the office building of the Canadian Pacific Steamship Ltd., in Yokohama was destroyed.

The general agent of the company, who made the report, was unable to say definitely as to the fate of his staff.

HEALTH RESORT NOT DESTROYED.

London, September 3.—The health resort of Karuzawa, about 80 miles northwest of Tokyo, was not damaged by the earthquake, according to a message received today by the church missionary society. Karuzawa is a gathering place for missionaries during their summer holidays and also is the site of many of their conferences.

TOKIO DEVASTATED, AIRMAN REPORTS.

Osaka, September 3.—(By the Associated Press.)—Lieutenant Ishida, who flew over Tokyo and the stricken district in an airplane yesterday, has reported to the commander of the Nagoya division that the imperial palace was only partially damaged.

Tokio itself is devastated, with the exception of Ushiohara ward, part of Koishikawa ward, practically the whole of Yotsuya ward and the north side of Asayamada.

Nearly all the concrete and brick buildings collapsed. Fukagawa ward was flooded by the tidal wave.

The airman said it was difficult to fly over the capital at a height suitable for observation purposes because of the intensity of the flames and the suffocating smoke.

The imperial palace has been thrown open for refugees.

Nothing is known as to the safety of the foreign diplomatic representatives and there is no news concerning the many foreign residents.

The latest estimate of casualties in Yokohama alone exceeds 100,000.

Reports from Yokohama say that the damage to buildings in the foreign settlement has been particularly serious.

The specie bank and the Grand hotel in that city have been demolished.

While the capital of the empire burns, the new premier, Yamamoto, hastened the work of forming his cabinet and various reports state that the new government was officially installed last evening.

After the final meeting of the ministers yesterday, Acting Premier Uchida decided upon the promulgation of martial law and the establishment of a relief bureau.

It is reported that martial law has been proclaimed in Yokohama and markets throughout Japan have been closed.

The terrible plight of the population of Tokyo, as depicted in a graphic dispatches received here. So acute has the food shortage become in the capital that the hungry people have been trying to scavenge the carp in the pond in Hibiya park.

FOOD RIOTS RAGE IN FAMISHED TOKIO.

San Francisco, September 3.—(By the Associated Press.)—Tokio, according to a radiogram received tonight by the Radio corporation from Iwakai, 155 miles from Tokyo, is in a state of anarchy.

The gendarmes in reported in these advices to have exerted the most strenuous measures to suppress the disorders, even attacking the rioters with their swords.

A number of Koreans were in the mob, the advices said.

The advices confirmed earlier reports of a great fire in Yokohama and an estimate that there had been at least 100,000 casualties there.

The fires, the message said, were caused by or followed by the explosion of oil storage tanks in the city where reserves of fuel oil for the merchant and naval marine were kept.

Nogeyama, a better class residential section of Yokohama; Iseya, another section where stood a notable store of Jo Naoke, prime minister of the shogun at the time Japan was opened to foreign intercourse, and Kanoniyama, a third section, all were destroyed, leaving thousands in extreme misery.

There has been no news received in Japan from the Bonin Islands, on which is located a cable relay station, and it is feared, the advices declared, that the land there was submerged by the tidal wave following the tremble.

The advices also confirmed earlier reports of the submergence of the island of Enoshima, "picture island," one of Japan's most beautiful spots. This island, the message said, was swept away by a tidal wave, as were also Honomuka and Isoko, villages in the vicinity of Enoshima.

Many Europeans, visitors and residents of that section, are missing.

MORE JAP ROLVITY ARE BELIEVED DEAD.

No news has been received of Prince Kanin and his mother, who were at Kamakura when the shocks began. Prince Kanin has remained Oda- yama in a search for them. The mother of Princess Kaya, who also was at Kamakura, is reported to have been killed by death shortly after the earthquake.

Three hundred thousand bushels of rice are being rushed from Korea on a naval vessel to be used in relief work in Tokyo.

More than 70 patients in the University hospital at Tokyo are said to have lost their lives in the earthquake.

Volcanoes Add Lava To Horrors in Japan

Declares One Report

San Francisco, September 3.—(By the Associated Press.)—A dispatch from Nagasaki last night reporting destruction of the Fuji spinning mills near Mount Fuji and the death of 8,000 operators, also stated that a number of volcanoes were reported to be active.

It Mount Fuji is among the erupting volcanoes, it is the first time it has exploded since 1707, but through out its long rest its deep red hot crater at the summit has offered an ominous sign that it might be aroused to fury at any moment.

There are about 200 volcanoes, fifty of which are more or less active, in the three volcanic ranges in Japan, the Kurile, Fuji and Kirishima.

Notable cases of explosions in recent years after long spells of dormancy include:

Torijima, 1902, killing 125 islanders.

Agatsuma, 1903, killing two geologists.

Bandaisan, 1888.

Sakurajima, 1914.

Also, a complex volcano with its high cone towering 3,000 meters, is perhaps the largest volcano in the world. Its crater extends about 15 miles north and south and ten miles east and west. Near Kurishima, heima and Asama are almost perpetually smoking.

DEATH TOLL UP AS VEIL RISES

San Francisco, Cal., September 2.

(By the Associated Press.)—Every report received from Japan throughout the day either confirmed or increased previous estimates of the havoc wrought by the earthquake and destruction by the quadruple catastrophe which has befallen the central eastern section of Honshu, largest of the islands of the Japanese empire.

Beginning at noon Saturday with a series of earthquakes which razed most of the city of Tokyo and large sections of Yokohama and other cities in the vicinity, the disaster was continued by fires which broke out in scores of places. Tidal waves followed, engulfing and washing into the sea hundreds of people.

Topping all previous estimates of death and ruin Ujio Oyama, Japanese consul general in San Francisco, late today received from Michitaro Yada, Japanese consul general in Shanghai, a report that 100,000 persons were killed and 1,000,000 made homeless in the Tokio-Yokohama section.

Tokio Dead Total 160,000.

Former estimates from various sources have placed the casualties as high as 100,000 dead in Tokyo alone. One of these came from the Japanese minister of marine by way of Osaka. Other reports told of severe casualties both on land and sea.

A composite of reports depicts Tokyo and Yokohama as a shattered wilderness of mortar, bricks and stone where once stood some of the stately structures of the empire.

Dead and dying are on every hand. The survivors who can grope their way through the fire and smoke and debris are leaving the city for places of safety.

Those who still live are threatened with starvation and many are trying to catch fish from ponds and lakes to tide them over until food arrives.

It is estimated that at least 1,000 tons of rice alone is needed to meet the emergency created by the food shortage. The imperial palace, which was badly damaged by quake and fire, has been thrown open to the needy and injured survivors.

Severe Strager Description.

What happened at Yokohama can be barely more than surmised. But every report, though meager, confirms the worst fears. While it seems certain most of the foreign residential section escaped, it is estimated 1,400 buildings in the city were destroyed. The number of dead is countless. An officer of the steamer London Maru reported that the bodies were scattered everywhere on land and in the water where many sought refuge in ships after the quake.

How extensive the quake was cannot be accurately stated. It is known it extended as far south as the Izu peninsula, on the eastern seaboard about 100 miles south of Tokyo. A message by cable from Kobe to the Associated Press tonight said there was a bad shock in Toyama, a city of more than 60,000 population near the northwest coast of Japan, nearly 200 miles northeast of Tokyo, and in Kobe, only 250 miles southwest of Tokyo. The vibration seems to have permeated the island transversely.

Fate of U. S. Embassy Dark.

In addition to the hundreds of large public and private buildings destroyed, which include a large number of Japanese government buildings, hospitals, arsenals, printing and newspaper offices, it was learned tonight through Osaka that the Italian and French embassies in Tokyo were destroyed.

Nothing has been learned of the fate of the American embassy and its staff.

Eight of Tokyo's fifteen wards are known to be almost totally wiped out, while the remainder are largely in ruins or burnt over, one total number of buildings destroyed being placed at 200,000 for the city and suburbs.

New Quakes Reported.

In Yokohama bay and at Yokosuka, a city of 70,000 on the upper reaches of the bay, the destruction is nearly as great, population considered, as it is in Tokyo. Reports came today of new quakes centering in Yokosuka yesterday afternoon, doing great damage especially to ships. It is known that Saturday's quakes and subsequent tidal waves did great damage to Japanese naval vessels.

The extent of the damage, however, is not determined.

The quake yesterday, today's reports said, destroyed the telephone exchange at Chojamachi, killing 40 operators. At 7 o'clock last night new quakes shook Kawaguchi, destroying 500 houses and damaging 1,500 more.

Other places where destruction was complete or nearly so, as a result of Saturday's quakes, are: Nagoya, with a population of 620,000, "virtually destroyed"; Sakso, 600 perished when railway tunnel collapsed; Ito, 500 houses washed away; Hakone, famous mountain resort frequented by foreigners, "easier to count the dead than the living"; Enoshima, "picture island," submerged, "a sea in mud"; Oshima, volcano emitting smoke; Odawara, swept by a tidal wave. Other volcanoes in the island nearby are reported active.

All Classes Suffer.

The rich and titled suffered along with the poor and the obscure. When the first shock came a session of Japanese leaders and statesmen was being held in the naval club for the purpose of selecting a new cabinet to take the place of that of the late Premier Kato, which resigned when the premier died. Although the building collapsed, the leaders who survived adjourned to another building and completed the cabinet which was announced in Associated Press reports today.

A report from Osaka this afternoon said that Viscount Takaha, former premier, and 20 other leading members of the Seiyukai, or government party, were killed while holding a conference and it is surmised it was the conference to select a cabinet. The course displayed by the statesmen is taken by many as an example of the stoicism of the Japanese people at large who because of centuries of frequent earthquakes and other disasters have come to regard such things as "fate" and say "it can't be helped."

The report of the cabinet meeting was given to the Associated Press by the Radio Corporation of America.

While the emperor and empress are reported safe at Nikko, a resort, Prince Yamashina and Princess Kaya, of the higher nobility, are reported dead. Prince Masayoshi Matsukata, former premier and keeper of the privy seal, has died from injuries, according to a report from the Nagoya railway bureau by way of Nagasaki.

A large colony of foreign missionaries at Karuzawa have escaped, it was learned.

While survivors are uniting in emergency rescue and relief work under the discipline of martial law promulgated by Premier Yamamoto, the world outside Japan began today to rush to the scene of the disaster with every available facility of assistance.

The United States and British navies, however, rushed ships from Chinese and Philippine waters to Yokohama to aid in the rescue as far as possible. The American ships, it was reported, have been stationed at vantage points to relay wireless messages connected with the rescue work. Red Cross units in the Philippines and China have been ordered to Tokyo.

A cablegram from Kobe, received tonight by the Associated Press, said the American consul there had commandeered the United States shipping board's steamer West Grove, filled it with food and started it for the center of the devastated region.

A message received here at 4 o'clock this afternoon by the Toyokisen Kaisha said its ship, the Korea Maru, is safe in Yokohama bay and has 2,500 refugees aboard. The message was received from the company's agent in Kobe. It also said that communications have been reopened between Kobe and Numazu, 85 miles west of Tokyo.

Another report today said railroads, badly torn up in every direction from Tokyo are being rebuilt between Tokyo and Yokohama and that connections will soon be completed between the harbor city and the capital.

The body's normal temperature is 98.6 degrees.

Alderman J. L. McLendon Offers For Re-Election On Business Platform

Believing it to be my duty as a citizen and a business man to serve my city whenever needed, I allowed a committee of Sixth Ward citizens to enter my name as a candidate for Alderman three years ago, and the voters of Atlanta honored me with the office.

After serving three years my personal inclination is to step down and out because of the heavy demands upon my time, but Sixth Ward citizens, as well as citizens of other wards and my colleagues in Council, insist that my duty is to serve another term—hence I am a candidate to succeed myself, subject to the rules of the city white primary to be held tomorrow.

My service as an Alderman has been guided at all times and on all propositions coming before Council by one rule of conduct—to expend the City's money as carefully and economically as I would spend my own. If my service has been satisfactory to the taxpayers, it is because that rule has guided me.

During my service I have been a member of the sewer committee, auditorium committee, finance committee and other important committees, and I believe I can say truthfully that I have gained a good first-hand knowledge of the workings of practically all departments of the city government.

There is no politics or factionalism whatever in my candidacy for re-election. I got into the city government three years ago in the manner above stated, and have gone along doing the best I could for the interests of the whole people, not seeking the spotlight nor playing to the grandstand. I have no ambitions of a political nature, am beholden to no faction or special interest, and if re-elected will be perfectly free and unhampered on every proposition that comes before Council, as I have been from the day I took my place in that body.

As a plain business man, who believes in business-like administration, free from politics, favoritism, inefficiency and extravagance; as a citizen proud of my city, wishing to see it exemplify in the highest and best sense its motto, "Atlanta Always Ahead;" as an Alderman who has served a term, gaining a general knowledge of municipal affairs and doing my best to obtain for the taxpayers a full dollar's worth of value for every dollar expended, I offer my services for a second term.

I will appreciate the vote and support of all my fellow citizens who approve this platform.

Respectfully submitted,
J. L. McLENDON

Rev. B. R. Lacy, Jr., Defines Position On Bible Study

The following letter from Rev. B. R. Lacy, Jr., pastor of Central Presbyterian church, is in correction of statements which he was quoted as having made during the evening service at his church last Sunday night: "Editor The Constitution: 'In your account of my sermon of Sunday night on the subject of "Week Day Religious Education" you gave an entirely erroneous impression as to the object of my sermon. This impression was conveyed by the part of the sentence which read, "Rev. B. R. Lacy, pastor of Central Presbyterian church, declared that 'the state should not teach religion,' referring to the present system of Bible reading in public schools." I will say that I was not referring to the present system of Bible reading in public schools. The Christian council and our committee are making absolutely no effort to discourage or affect in any way the reading of the Bible in the schools. I do not understand how anything that I have said could be so construed. We are asking that the mere reading is not enough, and are asking that the children be excused on request of their parents to go for further instruction by teachers provided by their own faith. It is exceedingly unfortunate that anyone should imagine that our efforts are connected with any plans to alter existing laws as to Bible reading. "Yours very truly, "B. R. LACY, JR."

After consulting fifty specialists and spending several thousand dollars, he came to Atlanta School of Health, 413 Chamber of Commerce building, on August 1st and on August 3rd returned to his home in New York completely cured. On August 11th he writes:

"I am very heavily indebted to you. Since a couple of days before leaving Atlanta I have never put glasses on for even a moment. Prior or close work it makes no difference. That part of me is cured. DE BORDE IS DYING OF BULLET WOUND

A. P. DeBorde, 42 years old, of 177 Dandier street, is near death at Grady hospital as the result of a bullet wound, inflicted, it is believed, with suicidal intent.

DeBorde, who is cashier of the Atlanta Wooden Ware company, has been in poor health for a number of years. He had just returned to work after a two weeks' vacation, and left the office early, saying that he was going home.

At 7 o'clock at night he walked out of the house into the back yard and a minute later members of the family heard a pistol shot. The bullet entered his temple.

Grady hospital was at once notified and an ambulance rushed to the home. Doctors Monday night said that his chances for recovery are slight.

Mr. DeBorde has a wife and two children.

Effort To Block Police Clean-Up Charged by Sims

Charging that Dr. Carl C. Aven was brought into the race for council against Fred C. Woodall in order to defeat the administration police clean-up program by ousting a member of the police committee, Mayor Walter A. Sims declared at a third ward political rally at Hill street school, Monday night, that "as long as I am mayor, no man shall ever be chief of police, who has had the finger of suspicion pointed at him as having been connected with any lunco gang."

"The police department now is a hotbed of politics," the mayor declared, "and the police station ring is working with but one end in view, that of making one certain man chief of police."

Hints at Poole

The mayor did not designate at that juncture the "one certain man" but implied broadly that he had reference to A. Lamar Poole, former chief executive of detectives, and whom the present committee reduced to the ranks.

"The same interests that fought me in my race for mayor are fighting me now in the third ward by trying to defeat a member of my police committee," he said. "I can't accomplish any of the promises I made in my campaign unless I have the support of council and my enemies know that if they can break up my supporters in council they can defeat my program for making the police department as clean as a hound's tooth."

Councilman Woodall outlined his record and Alderman W. B. Hartfield, of the third ward, spoke in Woodall's favor. Chief of Construction W. W. Hansell spoke briefly, asserting the need for experienced men in council who could work in harmony with the heads of departments for the best interests of the city.

definitely on the police clean-up issue. Dr. Lingo declined to say whether he would support the administration's clean-up policy or not.

Friends of Dr. Lingo had already arranged a rally for 8 o'clock Tuesday at the Georgia Avenue school in the second ward. Dr. Lingo will speak and the mayor will be asked to speak "for a show down on the police question," Dr. Lingo's friends said. The mayor had already made a speech at the school on Monday night at 8 o'clock.

Woodall rally to be held at 8 o'clock tonight at Grant Park school on South Boulevard. Mr. Hansell and Edwin Johnson, council members, and Alderman Hartfield are also scheduled to speak.

Many Last Minute Rallies

Several other political meetings are to be held in various parts of the city Tuesday night, the last night before election day which is Wednesday.

Among the rallies held Monday night were at South Pryor Street school, which developed a spirited joint debate between J. W. Weaver and Thomas J. Slapay, who are opposing Dr. Lingo for mayor. Dr. Lingo, who is opposing Dr. Lingo for the aldermanic seat made vacant by Dr. Lingo's retirement. Dr. Moon and Dr. Aven both outlined their policies.

A rally of the supporters of Dr. W. M. Ethridge, who is running for councilman, will be held tonight at 7:30 o'clock at Hunter avenue and Martin streets.

Dr. Ethridge, present incumbent, will address the meeting in opposition to Walt Lindsey and C. R. Bennett.

STEPS TO REDUCE FIRE HAZARD WAIT

Alderman W. B. Duvall, of the sanitary committee, and council member, referred to the ordinance committee. They would practically revolutionize the city's system of garbage collection and disposal, effecting a saving of $50,000 per year, according to estimate of Chief John Jensen, of the sanitary department. One item of economy would be separating dry from wet garbage in order that the dry garbage, such as paper, boxes and rags, might be sold by the city.

The ordinance provide the following:

1. Collection of all garbage in downtown district at night instead of day time, thus removing offensive odors and dust during the hours when traffic is the heaviest.
2. Requiring all householders to place garbage receptacles at specified hours morning or night at some location convenient to cart drivers, so that time may be saved.
3. Requiring all householders to place in one receptacle all animal, vegetable and ash material and in a separate container all dry material such as boxes, rags and paper.
4. Requiring all persons to remove at own expense grass, hedges and weeds cut from their lawns or their property, instead of placing it in piles for the garbage collectors to take away to a dumping ground sometimes miles distant.

The aldermanic board Thursday will have to take final action on a number of other measures adopted by council, including letting of contracts for paving streets.

The appropriation of $90,000 derived from a special tax for building the Hunter street viaduct will receive the aldermanic board's approval at that meeting. The formal approval of the board will lend final legal sanction to the financing of the approach, as far as council is concerned.

An appropriation of $200 to the Sacred Harp Singers who hold their national singing convention here will have to be approved by the board. The appropriation was asked by Alderman I. N. Ragsdale.

Salary increases in the plumbing inspector's department will also go before the aldermanic board for sanction Thursday. Council approved an increase from $187 to $200 per month for the chief inspector and from $150 to $175 and to $165 for two other inspectors.

A revision of the fee to the city marshal's office for collecting fines on passed due taxes was approved by council and will be sent to the aldermanic board. It increases to $1.35 the fee for collecting from defaulters. Other fees are 75 cents for each fine collected.

An echo of a fight between Policeman G. T. Mann and an obnoxious prisoner was heard by council in the recommendation of the police committee that $28 be appropriated to the officer to pay for the clothes the prisoner tore from him in his struggle to avoid being locked up. Council appropriated the money, but the aldermanic board will have to concur to make it legal.

ENGLAND THREATENS WAR TO GAIN PEACE

enact of the league of nations in the Greco-Italian imbroglio, it was stated today in authoritative quarters. Lord Robert Cecil has been instructed at Geneva to support the covenant unreservedly and the British hopes are centered on his ability and experience in league affairs.

The British attitude, which has been strengthened with the return of Foreign Secretary Marquis Curzon to London, is to leave the entire question to the league until that body finally disposes of it. Abstemious meanwhile by the individual members of the league from all semi-official expressions, suggestions and recommendations as to what should be done is also favored.

Should the league fail to settle the difficulty, it is held, it will then be time for discussion of some other form of action.

WILL NOT ACCEPT LEAGUE DECISION

London, September 3.—(By the Associated Press.)—Reuters today says it understands the Italian government has instructed its representatives in the league of nations to abstain from further discussions of the Greco-Italian dispute.

Athens, September 3.—(By the Associated Press.)—The Italian government, through its minister here, Signor Montagna, has served notice on Greece that Italy will refuse to recognize whatever decision the league of nations makes in the present Greco-Italian crisis. Unconfirmed reports received here yesterday said that the Italians had occupied the islands of Samos and Cephalonia.

In her reply to the protest which the inter-allied council of ambassadors, Greece says she is prepared to denounce, Greece says she is prepared to pay such reparation as an international conference of inquiry might deem equitable. The reply points out that a Greek investigation of the massacre could not extend beyond the frontier and that therefore action by an August was once known as Sextilis, or the sixth month, the new year then beginning in March.

ITALY DENIES LAW VIOLATED

Rome, September 3.—(By the Associated Press.)—Italy has violated neither international law nor the League treaties of 1933-34 in her bombardment and occupation of Corfu, the government says today in a semi-official statement made public through the Stefani agency, Italy says the statement, one not sign the treaty of 1934 entered into between Austria, Hungary, France, England, Prussia, Russia and Greece giving protection to the islands.

The facts of the situation are, adds the statement, that the treaty of November 13, 1933, signed in London, established the neutrality of the Ionian Islands on the occasion of their reunion to Greece and that this neutralization was limited only to the islands of Corfu and Paxos. Article 2 of the succeeding treaty of London, of March 29, 1934, meanwhile was concluded between the above named powers protecting the islands, but Italy did not sign.

Previous declarations that Italy's bombardment of Corfu was not an act of war are reiterated in today's statement, in which assertions also are made that occupation of the island and maintenance thereof of a military force cannot be construed as warlike. "From all points of view," it says, "the occupation of Corfu is not an act of war nor a contradiction of law, and it is perfectly legitimate. It must not be forgotten that in time of war neutral territory must be used as a means of communication."

ITALY TO ABIDE BY LEAGUE BELIEF

Paris, September 3.—(By the Associated Press.)—Acceptance by Greece of the decision of the inter-allied council of ambassadors, contained in a message received yesterday, is regarded in French official circles as the most promising step toward settlement of the conflict between Italy and Greece. Similar acceptance by Italy is thought likely since the inter-allied council will be called for tomorrow. In the absence of the American ambassador, Myron T. Herrick, the council of the League of Nations, however, would act as an unofficial observer for the United States.

The tone of the talk in official circles indicates that France clearly prefers an investigation and mediation by the ambassadors' council to intervention by the league of nations. Italy has declared categorically that she does not intend to make war on Greece, and it is held that there is a real question whether the league is competent to decide whether the seizure of the island of Corfu constitutes an act of war or not is regarded rather as a juridical question which, in the absence of further hostile acts by Italy, is in the domain of the jurists.

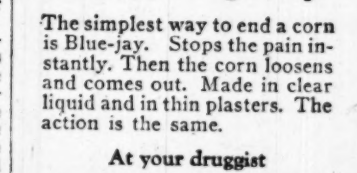

League intervention, it is pointed out in the circles, would be aimed at preventing armed conflict rather than interpreting the legality of acts such as the seizure of Corfu. The French hold that the question of responsibility for the assassination of the boundary mission and the occupation of Corfu can not properly be separated and that the ambassadors, having in hand the investigation of the assassination, ought consequently to settle any contention over seizures.

30 SLAIN, 33 HURT DECLARES AMERICAN

Athens, September 3.—(By the Associated Press.)—Colonel Stephen E. Lowe, of St. Louis, member of the Red Cross and attached to the Near East Relief at Corfu, reports that altogether there were twenty victims of the Italian bombardment prior to the occupation of the island. Among them were sixteen children, most of them killed by shrapnel which was fired among a crowd of Red Cross orphanage children bathing in the sea.

The first direct news from Corfu since the Italian occupation was received today with the arrival of the Greek steamship Janina, which had aboard Colonel Lowe, Miss Emma Wood, of Baltimore, chief nurse of the Corfu Near East Relief hospital, Dr. Kennedy, of Kingston, Ont., director of the British Save the Children fund, together with a group of expelled Greek officials and sixty Greek soldiers.

Colonel Lowe, describing the bombardment, said: "The number killed reached twenty; nine of these were killed outright and eleven died in the hospital. Thirty-two wounded are now in the hospital and there were perhaps fifty slightly wounded."

"Of the twenty dead sixteen were children. All the killed and wounded were refugees or orphans from American and British orphanages housed in the old fortress."

"The large number of children among the casualties was due to the fact that several shells landed in barracks which were being used as orphanages, while shrapnel shells exploded in the water in front of the fortress where four hundred Near East Relief orphan boys were bathing at the time."

"Immediately when the firing began I made a bee-line for the quay to protest to the first Italian officer who might land, and if possible prevent a continuation of the futile firing. The firing had stopped, however, by the time I reached the landing stage."

"Nevertheless, I approached an Italian officer, who replied that the only person in authority was his admiral."

Colonel Lowe's persistent efforts to see the admiral in order to get the orphans reinstated in the barracks failed until the following morning, when the admiral received him in a friendly manner inquiring his official position, and appeared to find difficulty in understanding how such a position could be entirely non-political, and to his explanation that he had no official connection with the government, the admiral remarked: "That is odd," and turning to his aide, remarked in Italian, "He is an American consul, I suppose."

BUILDING OF VIADUCT APPROACH MUST WAIT

The Alabama street approach to the Spring street viaduct cannot be built until a new site is selected for the central fire station and the property owners agree on a plan of finance for the construction, it was stated at city hall Monday.

A special committee of council has been working for several months to secure a centrally located site for the fire station at a reasonable cost to the city. Purchase of such a site this year is out of the question because of lack of funds in the city treasury. The $750,000 Spring street viaduct bond issue will be entirely consumed in the main viaduct and in the Hunter street approach. Funds that would otherwise have been available for the Alabama street approach were exhausted in widening Fairlee street to the right for the viaduct to cross the railroad tracks. The railroad would agree to the crossing and to closing the Forsyth street underpass only on condition that Fairlee street be widened in order to keep the railroad tracks accessible to trucks.

Japanese Citizen Here Discusses Great Disaster

Veils Feelings at Giant Calamity Under Mask Hard to Penetrate.

BY RALPH T. JONES.

Suppose you had been living on the other side of the world for a number of years. You had become thoroughly naturalized in your new home, but, always, when you thought of the real home, you thought of Atlanta, Georgia, U. S. A.

Then, one day, in the midst of the humdrum round of your daily business, you read that a terrific catastrophe had struck Georgia. Hundreds of thousands of Georgians had died, been crushed, mangled and burned, as their homes, towns and cities, came tumbling down about them. Suppose you read of the thousands who perished when the Candler building crashed to the ground in a cloud of powdered stone and crumbling brick. You read how the great apartment houses along Ponce de Leon had fallen into the city-wide pile of destruction, without time for their occupants to escape.

What would be your emotions?

Abbey feels for Homeland.

Those are the emotions, today, of William K. Abbey, citizen of Atlanta, and respected business man here.

Mr. Abbey did not sign his name that way always. When he was a boy he was known as Kame Abe, and his home was Yokohama, Japan. By the way, the last name, "Abe," has two syllables, hence the Americanized "Abbey."

On Monday afternoon, he talked of the Yokohama he knew and tried to picture the Yokohama and Tokyo of today, after the mighty forces of nature have seized those great cities in relentless grasp, shaken them to pieces and thrown them to the flames, to blaze as sacrificial torches to the primeval, tributes from modern Japanese civilization to the eternal power of earth herself.

"Yes," he said, in answer to queries, "I have relatives in Tokyo and Yokohama both, but they are not close. My own family all died years ago, and these who are probably dying today—I know them not very much."

Students have said the Japanese are stoical, unemotional. Mr. Abbey's lack of expression, as he said this, perhaps bears out this theory.

Cities Flimsily Built.

Both these great cities of Nippon are largely built of flimsy, native Japanese residences, he said. They are made of wood, bamboo and paper. They burn like tinder toys of children. Packed closely together, with narrow streets, they burn fast, the flames sweeping vast areas into the conflagration with a suddenness unconstruction of the west.

But Tokyo is not all of flimsy build, he said. There is an area, perhaps five miles wide, in front of the Imperial Palace, which is given over largely to the foreign quarter. This is built up with great office buildings, commercial houses, department stores, government buildings and the like, of stone and brick. It looks, he said, just like Peachtree, or Pennsylvania avenue in Washington, or Broadway in New York, so far as the architecture is concerned. There is one office building, the largest in Japan, known as the Maru-no-uchi building, over fifteen stories in height, that must be one of those which fell, believes Mr. Abbey.

Yokohama centers about its waterfront. Here are found the substantial buildings of that city, and here the full force of the tidal wave and hurricanes must have been felt. This was Mr. Abbey's home city, and he drew a graphic picture of the long water front drive, where automobiles roll along smooth asphalt just as they do in America. Then he described the little homes of the natives, back in the native quarters, stretching for miles upon miles inland. These are made of bamboo, with thin slats of wood for walls, and hanging paper to divide the rooms inside.

No wonder there is no hope of saving these from the flames from the fact that both cities possess some of the finest fire fighting apparatus in the world, and a force of firemen excelled by none.

But, you remember, the water supply went early in the earthquake, and so—the cities go, too.

According to old-time Japanese superstition, the island kingdom is supported on the back of a giant turtle. Mr. Abbey suggested with a smile that the turtle was turning over.

"Just stretching himself," he said. "Maybe he turned completely over and Japan go—like what is the name of that old place—nearly the same name Atlanta—oh, yes, thank you, Atlanta."

But then, you remember, they say the Japanese are stoical.

Here Nearly Twenty Years.

It is nearly twenty years since this son of the peachblossom land came to America. He landed here in 1905, when he was 22 years old. He has been back once since then, to Yokohama, in 1910. Then he stayed six months. He believes that the total of dead in this disaster will run higher than any figure yet given in press dispatches. And he smiled while he made the prediction.

He was asked what induced him to go back to Japan for his visit in 1910, and what he did while there.

Then the smile left his face, and a look of blank reserve took its place. "I go to fix my mother's burying place," he said.

They say the Japanese are unemotional. Perhaps it is true.

Sea's Great Depth Cause of Number Japan's Quakes

Mare Island, Cal., September 3.—(By the Associated Press.)—The great number of Japan's earthquakes is attributed by Captain T. J. J. See, astronomer at the government observatory here and father of the "sea leakage" theory of seismic disturbances, to the enormous depth of the ocean near the island of Japan.

"East of Japan there is what is known as the 'Tuscarora Deep,' a great area where the ocean is 4,600 fathoms, or about five miles in depth, the greatest abyss in the world and the source of the greatest disturbances heretofore known," said Prof. See.

"I have known that earthquakes are caused by the leakage of the sea through the earth's crust. The leakage is proportionate to the depth."

"The earthquakes in Japan are dated back many centuries, as far as history goes. This deep sea is the cause of them. This earthquake is reported to have occupied six minutes of time, which shows that the lava under the earth's crust was adjusting itself from the sea toward the land. The great tidal wave that followed the earthquake shows that the sea bottom was disturbed and the cables thereby broken."

"In geological time the whole main island of Japan has been raised by this process."

"There is no relief for Japan except to build good houses and make them secure against fire."

It is not necessary, he said, that there should be any definite crack in the ocean floor for water to get through to the hot lava underneath, cause steam, make pressure and necessitate adjustment in the earth crust, observed by mankind as earthquakes. He said that most of the ocean floor was granite, permeable to water under the immense pressures set up by great depths of that fluid.

"FRAME UP" CHARGES TO BE AIRED TODAY

Alleged charges by James H. Kirk, state's witness against E. C. Stigall, that Policeman C. R. Herndon and L. P. Higgins attempted to "frame him" by planting liquor to cause his arrest, will be aired in recorder's court this morning. Those arrested in connection with Kirk's charges are Jack Sarfaty, of 12 East Pine street; James H. Kirk, T. J. Cox, owner of the Dixie Soda and Confectionery, of 216 Ivy street, and Sam Blackwell, of 222 Ivy street.

According to Captain T. O. Sturdivant, of the detective department, Kirk came to his office August 29 and claimed that when Officers Herndon and Higgins came to the Dixie Soda and Confectionery company, the night of August 28, and found some whisky in a bottle that he (Kirk) had pointed out Cox as the owner of and demanded that the officers arrest him, they declined to do so, he says. He told Captain Sturdivant that he believed Officers Herndon and Higgins tried to get Cox to "plant the whisky" on Kirk in order to bring about his arrest and embarrass him as a witness in the Stigall trial.

Both officers deny Kirk's charges, but stated that whisky had been found in the soda and confectionery store. They denied a conspiring to plant the whisky or to discredit Kirk.

TRIBUTE IS PAID TO J. G. WOODWARD BY CITY COUNCIL

Tribute to the memory of James G. Woodward, four times mayor of Atlanta, who died last week, was paid Monday afternoon by general council, the body over which he had many times presided and of which he was a member for several terms. Memorial resolutions were adopted by a rising vote of all members and simple praise for his life and works was spoken of by Alderman I. N. Ragsdale, one of the few members of the present council who had served with him in the days when he was the dominant political power in Atlanta.

"No man ever challenged James G. Woodward's sincerity in public service or his rugged honesty," Mr. Ragsdale declared, "and as must always be remembered as one of the outstanding constructive forces in the history of Atlanta."

GOD OVER ALL.—The eyes of all wait upon thee.—Psalms 145:15.

JAPAN STRICKEN!

The heart of the whole world beats in deep sympathy with Japan in the overwhelming catastrophe that has swept down upon the Tokio and Yokohama territory, destroying two of the most progressive cities of the Far East, many smaller cities and towns, hurling more than 150,000 lives into eternity, and carrying immeasurable suffering and lingering deaths to hundreds of thousands of others in the wake of the tragedy.

Modern times in war and peace have recorded no such a toll of life and property prescribed to such an area, and the horror of it all, when analyzed in its various phases of death and suffering, from earthquake, tidal wave, and the dreaded holocaust of fire, defies human conception.

In all of the great tragedies of the world since the birth of Christ, the continent of Asia has suffered most. And in that continent Japan and China have been the victims of plagues, typhoons, earthquakes, tidal waves and all of the attending tragedies, to greater degrees, perhaps, than any other two nations on earth.

The density of population has been the contributing factor to those outstanding human tragedies. The extent of the present disaster in the Tokio-Yokohama zone can not be determined for many weeks, and in the end will no doubt exceed the present estimates. The suffering of famine and privation, and the menace of disease, will all contribute to the final toll, and perhaps roll up the casualties by the thousands.

The extent of the American casualty list is as yet unknown, but it will be heavy. Tokio is, or was, one of the most beautiful and progressive cities of the Orient, and so was Yokohama. They have been visited yearly, and especially since the war, by thousands of American tourists. On the other hand there is, or was, a large American colony in these cities, outside of the diplomatic circles, engaged in commercial and financial lines.

While the heart of the world pours out its sympathy, the purses of the nationals of all countries will open liberally to the great tasks of relief and rehabilitation. The appeal to help in relieving the distress in stricken Japan today is stronger than ever offered before—and it will be met. The heart of the world is touched.

THE TRIBUTE TO LABOR.

All Atlanta joined Monday in paying a deserving tribute to the hosts of labor.

The parade was one of the best ever assembled in the city, and the program of afternoon festivities surpassed in interest that of any former occasion of the kind.

It is fitting that the whole nation pauses this first September Monday in every year to honor the men and women who toil, and around whom the wheels of industry revolve. As land is the basis of wealth, and the former the backbone of a country, labor is the great driving wheel in the machine of life by which all of the other elements are thrown into useful and serviceable action.

There are producers and consumers, and the popular thought is to accept the wage-earner as a consumer, and yet without him there could be no production.

WHAT IT REQUIRES.

Are there 7,000 men and women in Atlanta, qualified to vote in the city election Wednesday, who favor a complete and up-to-date system of city parks, all revolving around a central park, within easy walking distance of downtown Atlanta?

If so—and certainly the voters of Atlanta were never called upon to approve a more worthy or a more compelling undertaking—then it is necessary that every one of those voters go to the polls and register their approval of the project, otherwise it will be killed by default, and an opportunity will pass that will never return.

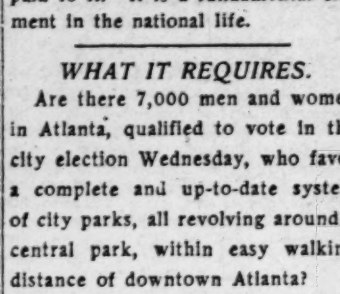

But that is not even sufficient to validate the proposed park bond issue. Between 9,000 and 10,000 votes must be polled, one way or the other, else the election, under the law controlling bond issues, will not be legal.

There must be a majority of the entire registration represented in the ballot boxes, or the election will not be legal.

That fact cannot be stressed too emphatically, for more worth-while development has been obstructed by the indifference or overconfidence of its "friends," through staying away from the polls, than by any other agency of destruction.

Just From Georgia

BY FRANK L. STANTON

Word From Brev Williams.

Don't stir in de hill ground when de hilltop says, "Come on, you!"

You got so short a time to stay here, it's a wonder you don't feather 'em nest for Harewood, Georgia.

And journey what we could see, maybe we'd never get out of sight of home.

Folks what looks wise ain't never been made to stand and deliver de goods.

This day an' time, if you burn de bridges behind you dey'll send you up for life.

The House and the Road. (Josephine Preston Peabody, in a Book of British and American Verse.)

The Little House says, Go. The Little House says Stay. And, O, it's bonny here at home. But I must go away.

The Little Road, like me, Would seek and turn and know: And forth I must, to learn the things The Little Road would show!

And go I must, my dears. And journey what we could see, maybe we'd never get out of sight of home.

That had no word but stay. Maybe, no other way. Your child could ever know Why a little house would have you stay.

When a little Road says, Go. Nowadays 'September comes in as quietly as a will collector on tiptoes.

This one is attributed to the House editor of the Monroe Appeal: It's easy to fool people, but it is different with a woman in men's clothing.

A Word From the Worried. (Bailey, in the Houston Post.) We are rather young in the business yet, with only forty-five years of experience behind us, but up to this time most of the people who have visited our sanctum came to be listened to.

An Extra Session. On the hilltop, as the plain, Life is tempest-tossed: Trouble's comin' back again To find the troubles lost.

It's fortunate that the chronic growlers don't get their wish for winter while the coal bin is low.

A Gentle Hint. To de middle of de sky, Wish you'd say to Summer: "Till de world goody."

Saying It All. "The bride," says a western exchange, "is a woman of wonderful fascination and remarkable attractiveness, for with a manner as enchanting as the wand of a siren and a disposition as sweet as the odor of flowers, she is a woman of rare beauty and a mind as brilliant as the glittering tresses that adorn the brow of winter, and with a heart as pure as the dewdrops trembling in the coronet of violets, she will make the home of her husband a paradise of enchantment, where the heavenly music of marriage shall be heard, and the strains of felicity that thrill the senses with the rhythmic pulsing of ecstaticapture."

This World. It must be a wonder In holy Heaven's sight, Killing all the men off, Yet having men to fight.

The Home Town Philosopher. If next winter finds us short on cool we'll have a good excuse for growling through it.

Playing the Game.

(Farmer Camp in Walton Tribune.) For when the Great Scorer comes to write against you, He writes not that you won or lost, But that you have played the game.

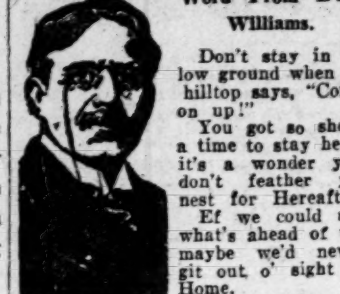

There's a lot of shining attributes to mark the splendid man, but seems to me there's one that gleams far above the rest—the one that lifts his lofty head toward the vaulted sky, and is sufficient, seems to smile and leave things deary.

The best of traits is honesty, a willingness to pay, an all consuming wish to meet the fellow man half way, a stout, determined soul to clean life's varicheckered slate of all the debts it contains, regardless of one's fate.

I like the man who knows his own strength, this man who likes to pay, who doesn't squirm and lie and cheat who doesn't run away; I like the man whose word is held as sacred as his life, who won't evade, or trim or shirk, no matter what the strife. I like the man who tries to pay, regardless of the odds, who shuts his eyes to all that where honor bright abides, who stands and strives and strives to meet his just and honest debts, then turns his face toward the sun, unfettered by regret.

The Spirit of Cooperation

BY JAMES A. HOLLOMON

For several months—indeed since the necessity for a complete reconstruction of economic conditions involving the great farming interests of Georgia became impelling—I have labored with all the earnestness of my heart and pen and voice for a closer and more helpful cooperation between the business men of the towns and cities and the producers of the rural communities.

As it is scores of farmers in various sections have been hard-hit by cotton failure, but on the whole, taking the total value of Georgia's 1923 production in all lines, the state is in a healthy condition.

The lesson is being learned—and if we could just throw-off the curse of politics, and the interruptions of platitudinous demagoguery for awhile, Georgia would soon take her rightful place in the procession of progress and per capita wealth.

Talking about cooperation, here is an editorial from the Lenoir Times that tells an interesting story.

"We learn that the cashier of the Bank of Bowersville has acted as county farm demonstrator for the farmer customers of his bank almost to a man. Mr. Ridgeway (the cashier) left his bank with the assistant several months ago and has devoted almost his entire time since to whipping the weeds in his trade territory. That is what we call service and service that is worth its weight in gold. The time has come that a bank banker has got to be more than a banker, to be a banker, we rejoice with Bowersville in the fight for the betterment of the county. This has been put up in that section on the weevil this year and we are informed that almost every section has control."

That is fine. I know country bankers all over Georgia that are doing the same thing in a measure, or at least closely cooperating on producing the same results.

All over the state hatcheries and creameries are springing up, meaning the greater development of poultry culture, and of live stock growing. The great progress made in tobacco growing in Georgia this year is now a matter of pleasant history.

Cooperation! Coordination. Pulling together! Here is an editorial paragraph from The Vidalia Advance—

"We are very much impressed with a tentative program which has been agreed upon between Waycross and Ware county on one hand and Blackshear and Pierce county on the other, this program calling for Waycross and Ware county to back Blackshear and Pierce county in tobacco, while the latter back Waycross and Ware county in dairying and the marketing of farm products."

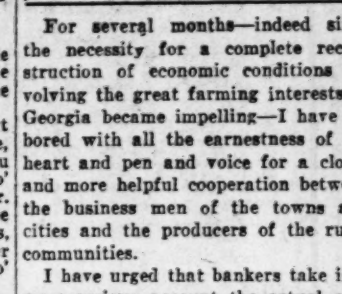

This is a new method of cooperation and it is a good one. This innovation on the part of Waycross and Blackshear might well be studied by the civic clubs in various towns and cities throughout Georgia.

The "Atlanta spirit" that has made an inland town develop into one of the great commercial and industrial centers of America, and one of the metropolitan cities of the continent, is nothing but a militant spirit of cooperation.

Let the "Georgia spirit" make Georgia indeed and in truth the Empire State of the South, not only in area, but in per capita wealth, and in the general contentment and prosperity of her 3,000,000 people!

HEALTH TALKS

BY VIVIAN BRADY (Copyright, 1923, by The Constitution.)

No matter how early or how late the bambino begins toddling he can't please everybody. Therefore he has sympathy. If he tries to walk a little too early in the estimation of Mrs. Neighbor he will probably have bow legs or flat feet, or something.

And if he takes his own good time about it and waits until he is 15 or 16 months old, Mrs. Neighbor is afraid his mind isn't normal.

The average healthy baby makes his first voluntary muscular efforts when he is about 4 months old, when he begins to grasp things deliberately. It is the fourth month that he learns to hold his head erect when the trunk is carefully supported. Yet many a parent handles a baby as if he were a helpless creature, and to these things when only a few weeks old, his mind isn't normal.

In the ninth or tenth month the young bambino gets fancy notions in his head and tries to get up on his feet by pulling himself up by the crib or grabbing hold of grandpa's whiskers; if there isn't too much noise and excitement over this he becomes so proficient that he can stand on his feet for a moment without any assistance at all. After this there is no holding him. In no time at all he'll be running around the yard like a fence.

From this stage, say the age of 16 months, the bambino, if well born, imitates Christopher Columbus. He is forever eager to set out on voyages of discovery; in many cases he discovers the neighbors, who, up to the moment have been absolute strangers. Bambiños are great little social organizers or ice crackers.

No matter how early in his career he begins to toddle, he will, in time, be a baby who is not to be trifled with. Do not attempt to restrain him on the theory that he is so heavy and young that he'll make himself out to be a monster. On the other hand it is unwise to urge or teach the baby to attempt to walk before he is a year old, or to keep him with apparatus of any kind which favors too early walking.

Certainly a baby requires no shoes before he is old enough to walk; after that time the normal development and strengthening of a baby's feet. It is a shame to put hard, stiff shoes on an infant not yet old enough to toddle, or to wear the shoes out. A shoe should never mold, restrict or confine a child's foot; no heel should be permitted on the shoes of children under 12 years of age.

The young bambino who has not yet learned to walk should not wear even stockings in very warm weather. Wool stockings in the winter time will keep his feet warm, without shoes of any kind, in cold weather. Wool stockings or soft shoes in very cold weather.

Georgia Orphan Homes Are Held Above Reproach

Georgia has a right to be proud of the care she gives to her dependent children in contrast with the picture drawn by Secretary of Labor James Wilson in his address at the city auditorium on Sunday afternoon, Miss Rhoda Kaufman, acting secretary of the state department of public welfare, was the guest of honor.

"When we heard Secretary Davis speak yesterday of conditions that prevail in some parts of the country, we were deeply grieved. The dependent children we could not help but feel very happy over the fact that such conditions do not exist in Georgia, and we are proud to say that the Georgia orphan homes are held above reproach."

Blindness Cure

Claimed by Girl At Revival Here

Bodily healings through the power of prayer, which have been a feature of the revival services conducted by the Bosworth party, of Chicago, at the Gospel Tabernacle on Capitol avenue, reached an impressive stage at the Monday night meeting when two men testified they had been cured of blindness through the power of prayer.

One of the men, a young man, said he had been blind since birth, and that he had been cured of his blindness through the power of prayer.

Another man, a young man, said he had been blind since birth, and that he had been cured of his blindness through the power of prayer.

Miss Rosabelle Cornwell, a young woman about 25 years of age, told the audience she could see following the evangelist's services. She said her home was at Griffin.

Hester Wells, of R. F. D. No. 3, Decatur, testified she could hear in one of her ears after long standing deafness, and a young girl from Griffin, whose relatives said had been stone blind, said she could see after Evangelist Bosworth had anointed and prayed for her.

Man Is Arrested Following Death Of Britt Stischer

The mysterious death of Britt Stischer, 23, and injuring of Miss Ruby Bell Cantrell, 15, were given as reasons by county police authorities for the holding of George P. Stischer, of Almond park, in the Fulton county jail, charged with murder and assault with intent to murder.

Stischer received fatal injuries when thrown from a motorcycle side car. County police stated they believe the machine was operated by Silvey. Miss Cantrell was injured when struck by the same speeding machine, is the belief of the police.

In his cell in the Fulton tower Silvey denied all knowledge of an accident. He declared that he had just arrived at his home and that the latter was all right at the time. Silvey denied stoutly having struck anyone Sunday.

Lieutenant Carroll of the county police, however, insisted that Silvey be held under a charge of murder in connection with the death of Stischer, and a charge of assault with intent to murder in the injuring of Miss Cantrell.

Miss Cantrell was unable to divulge any details of the accident in which she received a broken leg and severe head bruises, save that she had been run down by a motorcycle on her way to church Sunday night.

Stischer returned to his home Sunday night about 8 o'clock, police stated, and retired. Later he became ill and members of the family were called. His condition growing rapidly worse and a physician was summoned. Stischer could give no details and just before he lapsed into unconsciousness he is reported as declaring: "We had a telephone party." Stischer died at 4 o'clock Monday morning.

Immediately following his death county police were summoned and a search for Silvey was started. They were told that Stischer had been riding with Silvey Sunday. Silvey was arrested about 11 o'clock Monday morning.

Central Park Idea Held Not Feasible By W. M. Hairston

Editor Constitution: The establishment of a central park as proposed by the real estate people is not at this time practical. The attempt upon the part of the real estate people to build the cost of the city's financial inability to handle the matter by bond and prolonged appeals in behalf of the children will not work as it did in the case of our recent $7,000,000 bond issue.

The scheme to establish the Central park originated with the real estate people and is sponsored by them. I am opposed to the Central park for the following reasons: It is not stated what amount is to be paid for the grounds. Nor how much a acre goes for improvements. No provision has been made to handle the matter in a safe and sound manner.

The real estate people who are the promoters of the scheme have selected a committee from among themselves to handle the matter. The land selected is not an ideal place for a park. It is at least a hundred feet from the city and is opposite the governor's mansion. It is a better place for a dumping ground than a park.

The land proposed for this park and for which the voters of the city are asked to pay $200,000 in bonds consists of 27 acres and not 80 acres as has been stated by the promoters of this exceedingly bold scheme. There is lots of land in the city set apart for parks still unimproved. We have other better more important need just at this time than parks. Atlanta's greatest asset is her public schools, and they demand every spare dollar that the city has.

No bond issue can be launched and materialized without increasing our taxes. It is the issue of folly and a most nefarious imposition upon the public to assert that a bond issue can be put over without increasing the city's expenses. Which means increased taxation.

All this wind-jamming about increased valuation is misleading. Increased assessments of property are not real valuations. A man's property is not worth a place of nine million dollars and increased the assessment $900 and in actual valuation this property is not worth as much as it was when the raise in assessment was made.

Why should our taxes be higher per acre than those of other cities? The truth in the premises of this new scheme is not being fairly presented to the people. Enough is not known as to who will manage this idea. If it should materialize, and the general consequences that will follow the confirmation of this hurried up proposition of the real estate people. For the above conclusions which I regard as sound and irrefutable I appeal to the thinking people of Atlanta to vote against the park bond issue.

Grand Jury Quiz Into Evans Case Continues Today

After electing W. Bayne Gibson former attorney and hearing testimony from several witnesses, the DeKalb county grand jury adjourned Monday afternoon to continue its investigation of the shooting of Policeman W. W. Evans at 9 o'clock Tuesday morning.

Evidence was presented to the jurors by Solicitor Claude C. Smith, assisted by R. C. W. Ramey, solicitor of the city court. Although the nature of the testimony was withheld, it is understood that it was substantially the same as that told to the corner's jury last Thursday at the scene of the shooting.

Several additional witnesses will be heard Tuesday before action is taken. Improvement in the condition of Miss W. W. Evans, widow of the slain officer who is held in jail at Deatur under a murder warrant, was noted Monday. She is said to have almost collapsed Saturday night.

Her attorneys, Ben W. Tye and W. Paul Carpenter, will urge an early trial in event an indictment is secured. Solicitor Smith and Attorney W. Schley Howard, entire legal assistants to the solicitor, will interpose no objection to their request, it is stated.

Evans died shortly after midnight Wednesday night from two pistol wounds in the head. According to Mrs. Evans, he drew the revolver on her, and her attempt to take it from him led to a scuffle, during which he was shot.

Reasons for Gas Price Discrepancy Sought by Napier

Attorney General George M. Napier, continuing his probe into gasoline prices, Monday sent out a number of questionnaires to various dealers in oil, seeking to discover why there is such a variance in price for the product in different sections of Georgia and of the entire country.

He pointed out that while Atlanta was now paying twenty cents per gallon, at retail, some states were getting gasoline as low as sixteen cents. In Georgia the price varies a cent or two in different cities.

The difference, however, between Atlanta and Savannah, residents of the port city now buying it at eighteen cents, is accounted for by the low rates for transporting the gasoline by water. Mr. Napier stated that he understood the cost of bringing gasoline from the west by boat, through the Panama canal, was only about one cent per gallon.

Mr. Napier is just back from Minneapolis, where he attended the national convention of Attorneys General of the different states, and intends to push his investigation of gasoline prices without any slackening until he has secured every piece of information available tending to throw any light on how these prices are made.

While in Minneapolis, Mr. Napier was honored by being made secretary and treasurer of the national association of attorneys general.

BUSINESS CEASES AS TRIBUTE TO LABOR

From far came the rumble of drums and fifes. As far as the eye could see, swarming, happy companies of the army of peace.

Later in the day there were field days, events, barbecue, brilliant fireworks and baseball games at Lake-wood park. Here the program was in charge of the Labor day committee consisting of Emmett L. Quinn, T. E. Hall, Walter Caraway, George E. Hane and E. O. McClain.

Only the street car men and the bus operators had a day of real labor. Record crowds were carried in all directions. Moving picture houses and theaters did a roaring business, while the postoffice, state capital and many stores were closed in answer to the proclamation of Mayor Sims.

The parade formed at the state capital at 10 o'clock. The divisions were as follows:

- 1—Mounted police.
- 2—Band.

WHAT, WHERE, WHY IS YOUR COLON?

The Most Critical Part of Your Anatomy and Physiology.

It is a wise man who understands his colon and keeps it in perfect working order. Health, happiness, vigor and long life are the gifts which an active colon can give you, and a lazy colon can take away.

But, back to our question:—What is your colon; where is your colon; why is your colon? Listen attentively for only a minute and you may learn something that may add half-a-century to your life.

Your colon is the last five feet of your digestive canal. It is your sewerage system; your garbage can, so to speak. Keep it clean and you are well and happy; let it stagnate and it will distill the poisons of decay, fermentation (gas) and putrefaction into your blood, poisoning your brain and nerves so that you are restless, irritable and blue; poisoning your heart so that you are weak, listless and lazy; poisoning your lungs so that your breath is heavy or foul; poisoning your stomach and digestive organs so that you are bloated, belching and uncomfortable with gas pains; poisoning your blood so that your skin looks yellow, sallow or foul; poisoning every part and organ of your body, through your blood, making you look and feel old and ugly long before your time; making your joints and your back stiff, your eyes dull and your brain sluggish.

By the perfect law of Nature, your colon should empty itself three times a day,—within an hour after eating. Does your colon work that well? If not, it has lost its tone. What do we mean by tone? Your colon is a hollow muscle. Its walls are made up of long, muscle fibres or muscle cells which, by their contraction, empty the colon just as you would squeeze a rubber hose pipe. These muscle fibres should contract three times a day,—within an hour after each meal. If they do not contract, they have lost their tone,—their power to contract.

But, there is a practically perfect remedy for lazy, flabby colons. This remedy quickly restores the tone, is absolutely harmless and decidedly pleasant to take. Clip this article and take it to your druggist. Tell him to give you a bottle of that new preparation, called Colotone,—the colon tonic. It will cost you one dollar if you are pleased with it, nothing if you are not pleased with it, for every druggist has been instructed to refund the price and ask no questions if his customer is not thoroughly satisfied.

But you will be delighted with Colotone for it will make you feel like a different person. Your eyes will sparkle with vitality and alertness; your brain will be clear and active; your complexion will be fresh and transparent, reflecting the purity of your blood; your digestion will be thorough and your appetite keen, for your food will taste delightful and will agree with you; you will sleep and awake refreshed; your system will be full of vim and vigor; you will be stronger, stouter, vigorous,—you will enjoy the pleasure of living.

Get started on Colotone today. Nearly every person over twenty-five or thirty years of age, and many younger, need Colotone more or less. You will be simply delighted with it. Colotone cannot possibly do you any harm—it can only do you good. Try it on your guarantee. It will help you live long, well and happily.—(adv.)

Many Georgians Anxious Over Relatives in Japan

DR. NEWTON TELLS OF FORMER DISASTERS

BY H. H. WIMPEE.

Fate of numerous Atlantans and other Georgians who were in the devastated and stricken area contiguous to Tokio and Yokohama, which, Saturday were buried under ruins by a terrific earthquake and are now seeking masses of flames, has not yet been learned, a telegraphic and radio dispatches which so far have reached a world horror-stricken at the disaster.

Friends and relatives of several Atlantans, former residents of this city, and numerous Georgians touring the Orient or there at the call of duty, are apprehensive over the safety of their loved ones, and anxiously await intelligence from them.

Owing to the difficulty of communicating with the two ill-fated cities, because of wires and other means of telegraphy having been put out of commission, direct touch with Tokio and Yokohama is impossible at present and will probably remain so for several days.

Miss Tumlin in Japan.
Miss Mollie Tumlin, daughter of the Rev. J. M. Tumlin, formerly pastor of the Decatur Methodist church, was scheduled to reach Yokohama last Thursday on the steamship "President Madison." She recently completed training in Seacrest college, Kansas City, as a missionary and departed from Seattle, Wash., on August 12.

Members of the Candler family here expressed the opinion that Mr. and Mrs. Candler were out of danger when the earthquake occurred. They have not heard from them, however.

A vivid description of the city of Tokio and other Japanese cities, was related Monday by Dr. J. C. Newton, of 21 Avery drive, who recently returned from Japan with his wife, after having served as a missionary there for 35 years. They are making their home now with their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Underwood, in Ansley park.

"When we left Tokio three months ago," asserted Dr. Newton, "that city was preparing to float a several million dollar bond issue to effect municipal improvements. The people there are turning to good roads, better water facilities, sanitation and other improvements on a large scale."

Tokio, in addition to being the chief railroad center of Japan, is perhaps its greatest attraction to visitors of any other municipality on the island. It offers hundreds of picturesque sights, despite the fact that it is the most modern city in Japan, with street cars, automobiles and other modern conveniences.

During his sojourn in Japan, Dr. Newton declares he has witnessed several times, earthquakes and fires which threatened to destroy Tokio. The city is never safe, he said.

"While I located at Kobe, a distance of 300 miles from Tokio," said Dr. Newton, "I had occasion to frequently visit Tokio and always felt unsafe while there. I have been there several times when fires broke out causing great damage, and many times earthquakes did great damage. The place where I made headquarters was considered the safest in the whole island. I felt safe there, but not in Tokio."

Dr. Newton of many years served as president of an educational institution in Kobe, and had occasion to travel over the entire island many times.

Jones Has Good Year.
Lorie Jones, who attracted so much attention by his good pitching and playing for the Negrade Club the first part of the season, has just returned to Atlanta, having had a great year with Spindale, North Carolina, team. Pack Is Manager.
Owen Pack, the popular manager of the Ponce de Leon team, has again taken over the Peachtree Billiard parlors over the Tudor theater formerly run by the Atlanta Athletic club. Pack, who was at this location for several years and was the headquarter for most of the amateur and semi-pro ball players around Atlanta, Pack, who was formerly a South Georgia pitcher, has done much for the young ball players around Atlanta.

Dr. H. N. Alford Is Winner At Labor Day Trapshoot

Turns in Best Score for First Day Shoot Held by the Atlanta Gun Club.

BY CAPT. JOHN E. AVERY.
The first day of the annual Labor day trapshooting tournament given by the Atlanta Gun Club started promptly at 10 o'clock Monday morning.

There were thirty-six entries, several contestants from Alabama, Mississippi, Florida and points in Georgia entered.

Dr. H. N. Alford seemed to be in perfect form for the first day and lead the field on all targets, scoring 188 in the 200 yard singles, 47 out of 25 pairs and 47 out of 50 in the yard.

On the first 100 in the morning, T. J. Travis, of Coosa, Fla., and T. J. Travis, of Mobile, Ala., were leading with 95. Alfalfa, of Alabama, and M. C. Tyler, of Biloxi, Miss., second with 93 each.

The second 100 in the afternoon continued the 200 yard targets changed the standing. Dr. Alford scored 95, making a total of 188 out of 200, while Travis, of Coosa, Fla., could only account for 85, which was his total for the day.

Dr. Alford's score of 188 was the best in the history of the Atlanta Gun Club. It was the second hundred, after missing stolen bases, Kamm, Cobb, sacrifices, Cobb, Manush, Rigney (2); double plays, Rigney to Pratt to Blue, Pratt to Blue, McClellan to Collins to Sheely, Schalk to Sheely to Schalk; left on bases, Chicago 8, Detroit 10; Niehaus' Wildness in First Game Gives Bears Margin To Win; Best Loses Second Mobile Wins Morning Game 2 to 1 and Afternoon Affair Is Dropped 4 to 3—A. Niehaus and Clarke Star.

Mobile, Ala., September 3.—(Special.)—The Mobile Bears took a double-header from Atlanta yesterday winning the morning game, 2-1, and the afternoon contest, 4-3. Both contests were hard fought ones, but Mobile for once in many weeks got the breaks in the afternoon engagement. "Red" Bird outpitched Dick Niehaus in the early game and received great support from the players behind him. Mobile won the morning game in the first inning of the affair when Niehaus got away to a bad start, taking two singles and a walk. Bird was in danger several times of being scored on, the visitors having men on third base three times, but the southpaw turned them away from the rubber.

Was Uphill Battle.
The second game showed Joe Acosta on the hill for Mobile and Best for the Crackers and was an uphill affair. During base running on the part of Mulvey and John Henry's pinch single in the seventh gave the locals the game. Acosta, after the Crackers had scored three runs off him, was taken out in the seventh inning for a pinch hitter and Tommy Long replaced the game. The afternoon game was a wild and wrapping one on the part of the Crackers with Umpires Erwin and Johnson.

In the sixth inning Danny Clarke drove the ball up against the right field fence on the top of the fence. Danny Williams had turned his back on the ball thinking it was a home run, but the sphere came back and bounded into the field and he was held to a single.

The entire Atlanta team headed by Manager Otto Miller came out on the field and protested that the ball had struck a guy wire as was the statement of a number of fans, but the "umps" ruled different.

Another row started in the eighth inning when Joe Guyon tripped to dead center with Long pitching. He had reached third when Niehoff made a bad throw to second. The ball rolled over near the visitors dugout. Long ran over and got it and threw Guyon out at the plate. The Crackers' first score of the day came in the ninth when Best struck a guy wire as was the statement of a number of fans, but the "umps" ruled different.

Bears Score First.
Mobile in the morning game started the scoring the first inning off Niehaus. Zeider, the first man up, was hit. D. Williams walked and Niehoff advanced the runners with a sacrifice. A wild pitch scored Zeider and sent D. Williams to first. Huhn then scored D. Williams with a long sacrifice fly to Burke. This was all of Mobile's scoring.

The only run of the Crackers in the morning game came in the second inning. With one out Moore singled to center. Best walked. Ring sent a long single to left on which Moore scored, a fast double play by Niehoff and Huhn stopping what looked like a run.

The Crackers tried hard to tie the score in the ninth due to a walk by Moore who reached third on Mike Zeider's single to left. Bill Marriott saved the game with a backward running catch of Ring's fly.

PILES CURED

Wedding Takes Place Saturday

Savannah, Ga., September 3.—The marriage of Miss Jessie Mae Williams and Charles William Owen took place Saturday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in St. John's Episcopal church. The Rev. W. A. Jonnard performed the ceremony.

The church was beautifully decorated with white flowers and ferns. The wedding music was played by W. Brooke Reeve.

The bride, who entered with her father, by whom she was given in marriage, wore a gown of white crepe georgette. Her veil of tulle and orange blossoms was worn in a Grecian style, and she carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Lois Hawley, the maid of honor, wore turquoise blue chiffon over blue satin, with an adornment at the waist of cloth of silver. She carried a shower bouquet of Columbia roses.

Miss James M. Yates, of Thomasville, Ga., sister of the groom, was matron of honor and wore orchid chiffon over flesh satin, similar in fashion to the maid of honor's dress. Her bouquet was of Columbia roses and summer lilac.

George Dutton was Mr. Owen's best man and the groomsmen were Donald Spann, Henry Howard, George Sanders and Osmond White.

Immediately after the ceremony a reception for the wedding party and a few close friends was held at the home of the bride's parents in East Fourteenth street.

factor that this season offers us such a variety of striking and clever linings—some too striking and too clever to suit the taste of the conservative. There was the much-talked-about ermine wrap shown a few weeks ago—dyed velvet has also been used to line some of the new ermine wraps. In fact, velvet seems to have been hit upon by many of the furriers as a lining likely to appeal to the taste of the woman out to buy a fur wrap. One wrap of sable is lined with bottle green crepe with two wide bands of plaid velvet ribbon—green, red and yellow—at the bottom.

Some of the sumptuous fur wraps show velvet linings with ornamentation of rhinestones. A wrap of ermine dyed beige has a burnt orange velvet lining, and another wrap of the same sort of fur has a lining of burnt orange brocade.

Less gorgeous but quite as smart are the new sport coats of dark fur, caracul notably, with linings of plaid wool. These coats are of three-quarter length.

For many seasons now the French dressmakers have been expounding their notion that a smart effect can be gained by lining a wrap with material of the same sort that is used to make the frock with which it is worn. Little summer frocks of figured crepe are still worn with caplets of black velvet coat, lined with white crepe bordered by applications of black velvet. Beneath is worn a frock of matching white crepe trimmed with black velvet. This very simple little black velvet wrap of Chanel's is bound to be seen again and again.

The idea of lining an American beauty velvet coat with blush rose silk or satin, or sapphire blue with baby blue, or bottle green with lettuce, has been carried out by several French designers. The idea is to seek the pastel tone of the color used in the wrap. The result is excellent, and women seem to like these delicately toned linings better than the figured crepes they have used for several seasons.

The favorite jacket lining of the three-piece suit for autumn is made from the same material used to fashion the bodice or blouse worn beneath.

The HOUSEHOLD

Edited by Anne Rittenhouse

Strings of Beads.

If you have expensive beads of any sort you should have them examined by your jeweler frequently to make sure that the string is not weak. Most persons who wear pearls or other precious beads do take this caution. The possessor of moderate-priced beads, however, can save himself a good deal of trouble if she examines the string frequently herself and takes the trouble of restringing the beads if there is any sign of wearing. Often inexpensive beads are strung on very brittle thread, which wears through shortly. It is not difficult to restring such beads on some sort of substantial thread. Some persons prefer dental floss to anything else, while others use mercerized cotton, double or triple when the size of the bead permits.

Don't use a needle. Have a piece of beeswax instead and wax the thread or threads well and keep them pointed and you will need no needle. In this way you can use a larger thread than would be possible if you had to allow for the needle as well in the end. Cut the string at the place where the old string has been knotted or at one clasp and, removing two or three beads, lay the end of the old thread beside the end of the new and wax them carefully together. By careful management all the beads may then be slipped over this waxed juncture without needing to be cut to desired length and clasps can be attached to the ends or the string knotted if the beads are of the slip variety.

BEAUTY CHATS

A Stenog.—Indigestion may be responsible for your offensive breath, but whatever is the cause, it must be cured in order for you to overcome the unpleasantness. In the meantime brush your teeth with peppermint water and use any of the many good antiseptic mouth washes recommended for keeping the gums in a healthy condition.

M. E. M.—If you are overweight, reduce to normal weight by lessening the size of the bust. If this is not the case, dress so the bust is less noticeable, which is the only safe way of handling the situation. Wear your corsets so they are quite loose for a few inches over the waistline. This lessens the apparent size of the bust. Y.—Whiteheads are the result of your excessively oily skin. They will disappear as you correct this condition. Eat less of all the rich foods, especially those containing oil; and drink plenty of water between meals.

Bathe the face in warm water, and after drying it, apply either witch hazel or a very weak solution of benzoin and water.

Ellen.—Consult a dermatologist about the moles that are increasing over the face and neck.

Curious.—Bobbed hair continues in favor, and for a young woman who must accomplish so much with your time, the style is advisable, especially as you say it is very becoming. The only way to prevent sunburn is to protect the skin from the sun. A heavy coating of powder or a veil worn while there is exposure will help some.

A sluggish liver or faulty elimination will cause the hands to redden. Teddy.—If you use henna in the shampoo it will give your hair the bright tint that you say has left it recently. As this reddish tinge is natural to you, the loss of it now would indicate that your scalp needs some treatment. Nothing helps so much in such cases as a daily vigorous massage. This will tend to increase the circulation, and with a healthy supply of blood, all conditions are improved.

The henna is not a dye but it gives a reddish tint while it also has tonic properties. If you need fuller directions for using it, I will be glad to mail them on receipt of a stamped self-addressed envelope.

R. C. K.—To increase your weight drink plenty of milk, beginning with one quart each day, increasing the amount as your digestion becomes accustomed to it, even up to four quarts.

Anna P.—If the small brown spots on your face and arms are moles, they can easily be removed by a process of impregnation by any good dermatologist. If they are freckles bleach them yourself with the juice from cucumbers.

Peggy K.—Advice to "A Stenog." answers your question about the breath. Remove the excessive oil from the hair by rubbing it with towels, just as if you were drying it after a shampoo. The only thing to do with brows that have been plucked is to bear with them until hair grows out again.

Tomorrow.—After The Holidays.

All inquiries addressed to Miss Forbes in care of the "Beauty Chats" department will be answered in these columns in their turn. This requires considerable time, however, owing to the great number received. So if a personal or quicker reply is desired, a stamped and self-addressed envelope must be enclosed with the question.—The Editor.

EXCLUSIVE OPTICAL SERVICE

Many patients pay for unsatisfactory glasses furnished by optical firms who claim to sell for a trifle less than the legitimate optical man. Glasses are like diamonds, they have a market value and when they are sold for less than the market value there is sure to be something wrong somewhere. The first thing you notice in Ballard's glasses is the comfortable feeling of your frame adjustments by the Ballard service which is not always found elsewhere. The second thing you notice is you have gotten rid of that nagging or tired feeling you often experience from glasses where there is some little something left out. We have thousands of patients all over the states who will vouch for this statement. Ask any of them.

Her Friend's Husband

CHAPTER LXVIII

"My Husband Is in Prison!"

(Copyright, 1922.)

"Well, we've got to have something to eat, no matter what happens!" Larry declared, rising from the top step, where he had been seated during their talk. "How about food, Mrs. Eaton? There must be something to eat in the house—and surely you'll let Gloria and me have something to eat before we start back to New York."

"You can't go back to New York—not unless you promise me—but even then—Valerie stopped, her eyes on the revolver that lay in her lap. "Of course you can depend on us!" Larry told her gruffly, picking up the revolver. "And this is a fool thing to have lying around loose. I'm going to take charge of it. I'm going down to the kitchen and see what I can find for breakfast. Why don't you go outside somewhere and get some air? It's like a tomb in here."

"We might sit on the back porch," suggested Valerie. Her voice took on a curious shading of tenderness, as if the thought of that back porch awoke memories, and when she and Gloria were seated on it, with tangled vines drooping their tendrils all about them, Valerie said quietly, "I used to love this porch; I'd sit for hours out here and sew."

Gloria leaned forward and laid one hand on her knee. "Why don't you tell me about what you used to do?" she asked. "Wouldn't it help?"

"Well, oh, I think I must tell some one. I'd rather tell you than any one else. I've kept it to myself for so long. She paused for a moment, staring straight ahead of her at the tangled, weed-grown strawberry bed that sprawled by the path leading to the barn. "I have to have money," she began presently. "It isn't for myself, for someone else. My husband isn't dead—he's in prison, and it's for him that I must have money."

"It isn't his fault that he's there, is it?" Gloria asked. "Oh, I know that people always say that, but this time it's true. It was a business matter, and though it wasn't his fault, Martin was held responsible for the fraudulent dealings that his partners had put over. Martin—oh, he couldn't do such a thing as they said he did! He is such a dear—there's no body like him. We came up through here on our honeymoon, and one day we took the wrong road and found this house, and loving it so that we bought it and settled down here. We spent that whole summer here; Martin didn't have to go to the city every day, and days when he did go I'd go with him. When we were there we used to do the sort of thing that you and Larry do—that's one reason why I've been so fond of you two, I think. You reminded me of Martin and myself."

"When the trouble came it seemed to me that I couldn't bear being separated from him. I had adored him so, you see; he was all my life. And when they sent him to Sing Sing—well, I almost went mad. "You've never been there, have you?" Gloria shook her head. "It's the most terrible place," Valerie went on. "I don't suppose it's any worse than other prisons; probably it's better than most of them. But when you get off the train and walk up the street leading from the station, and then turn and go to the road—oh, that big, gray place stands there waiting for you, and just tears your heart out, when you realize that someone you love is in there. I have looked at the other women in the waiting room and felt that they were the bravest people in the whole world, but nobody who hasn't been one of them can appreciate them. And when I read in the papers that a criminal has been convicted and sent there—oh, no matter what he's done, I can't help feeling for those who love him, who will have to go to the prison and wait to see him—and then go away and wait and wait till they can see him again!

"Sing Sing isn't so bad, Martin says; he insists that the cells aren't uncomfortable, and that the men have a good deal of liberty and interesting work—liberty! Why, I've seen them stand at the part of the yard where they can see the Hudson that's so awfully near—oh, it's heartbreaking to see a man stand there and look out as if his whole life was running past him, there with the river!

"But they play tennis, and baseball, and there's a band—the band plays quite well. Martin has learned to drum since he's been there. The man who leads it is in for life, and he's made the development of this band his biggest interest. And of course they have movies—and chapel services—oh, but it's ghastly! Martin has changed so. He was so ambitious, so eager to make something of his life, and now he feels that he never can. His health is failing. The whole thing, the injustice of it all is preying on his mind so, you see. And when I have to leave him there—he goes to the inner gate with me, and then he goes any further. One feels so hideously small and helpless when that gate is locked behind one, and the dearest person in the world is shut away there on the other side—oh, it's then that I feel that I'd rob and kill to get money to get a new trial for him, and get him out of that place!"

Tomorrow—A Strange Confession. (Copyright, 1923, for The Constitution.)

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS

Best for Baby.

Rubber toys are the only sensible playthings for the tiny baby, as they can be sterilized frequently and can do no harm if he should put them in his mouth.

When Buying Silken Hose.

It is sometimes wise to buy silk hosiery a half size larger than cotton or lisle; then the wear on the toes and heels is not so great.

Another Thought.

A wire tumbler holder screwed in the wall close to the kitchen sink is a suitable holder for the can of cleanser. This comfort, has a disagreeable habit of leaving a rim of rust wherever it is put down, and the tumbler holder eliminates this unpleasantness.

Short Cuts.

A steel bodkin is a good thing for joining the seams of a sweater. Wash hosiery after each wearing so the perspiration will not have a chance to rot the fabric.

Use confectioners' sugar for uncooked icings, as it will make a much smoother frosting than powdered sugar.

New linoleum should be cut and laid at least three weeks before it is nailed to the floor so as to prevent bulging. Only places that are apt to be kicked or broken should then be tacked.

Deep in the shaft of a coal mine near Duquoin, Ill., a service of prayer is held each morning before the miners begin their work.

Walking Clubs and Health For Busy Atlanta Women

BY LOUISE DOOLY

During one fall and winter season some time ago Atlanta's young women of the smart set adopted the English custom of afternoon walks. Those walks were a diversion as well as a profit to health, and they did not interfere with 5 o'clock tea engagements, because, like the English women, the Atlanta girls "dropped in" without the bother of going home first to change from walking garb into more formal afternoon costume.

Nobody could say that they were not just as good to look upon in tweeds or homespun, boots and tailored hats (and there is no reason in the world why these should not be snappy and becoming) because the out of doors and the exercise gave a sparkle to the eyes and a glow to the skin that the girl or the woman lacks who has to get the sparkle and the glow from a drug store and rush it on between many indoor engagements.

The fashion of these afternoon walks was recalled on reading a recent bulletin of the National Public Health commission which is devoted to the announcement of an educational campaign for a universal adoption of the custom of periodic physical examinations (to prevent the advance of the insidious diseases that give little outward warning) and for better knowledge and cultivation of correct posture.

Both of these campaigns are applicable to needs of both men and women and in all stations of life. Because of the great increase, however, in the number of women going into business, the professions and industries and because of the great danger that these women, absorbed by interest or necessity into a too tense application to their work which keeps them cramped for many hours over desk or machine and leaves them oftentimes too fatigued to seek voluntarily or spontaneously a counter-balance in exercise, the public health commission's efforts are here directed especially to the waking up of women to the value of these two things—periodic tests by capable physicians of their physical condition with an eye to correction of hitherto unsuspected maladies in their incipency, and correction of bad postures: Such slouched shoulders at a desk, for instance, as may help to develop tuberculosis or such cramped position or continued monotony of movement at machines as may form the basis for serious nervous disorders.

And so, with the health commission's array of facts, and the recollection of the pleasure Atlanta girls and young matrons used to get out of their custom of afternoon walks, here is a suggestion looking to the mother of posture (body position, carriage, motion):

Why would it not be a good thing for Atlanta's now large and splendid array of women in business, the professions and industry to form walking clubs? These could be as large or as small as any group might decide among themselves, and they would probably decide on the small group on account of the nature of the club purpose. Congeniality is best assured in the small group, and half the pleasure and benefit in walking is congenial companionship.

The time for the walks could be set to suit the different tastes or convenience of the members. Some might prefer having an early breakfast and walking to business in the morning. Others would wish to snatch every minute possible of morning sleep, and so these would settle on walking at the luncheon hour. Still others would choose the time when work has been put down for the day.

The important thing would be, not the hour, but the habit; the sticking to an hour once it is chosen. The forming of clubs would vastly encourage the walking, because if three girls in a certain section agree to walk together at 8 o'clock every morning, it is going to be much less easy for one of them to encourage herself in a morning's indolence if the other two girls are going to chide her for it, however amiably. And they will chide.

It ought to be an attractive thing about such a club that it would cost nothing. It would have interesting possibilities, too, in club and inter-club hikes on Saturday or Sunday afternoons, maybe with picnic suppers as a part of the program.

By-laws would hardly be necessary unless one perhaps which would stipulate that never less than three girls walk together; or if only two, that personal topics of conversation be taboo because such is the friendliness promoted by the wholesome association of two girls walking together in the out of doors that they are inclined to throw off artificial restraints and in their own language to "tell each other too much."

There is no need to dwell upon the number of girls and women who are every day dropping away from their usual vigor because of ill health. The facts of this condition are a matter of everybody's knowledge. But there are ways in many cases to avert the breakdown. Fresh air, exercise and rest, sometimes, instead of diversion, would be the simplest and almost a universal preventive. Walking is an ideal form of exercise and has that special attraction for the girl who wants to save some of her earnings in that it doesn't cost anything.

Then why not walking clubs?

New York, September 3.—The Musical Protective Union has indefinitely postponed suspension of operations in Greater New York theaters, which had been set for today, unless increased wages were granted.

President Mulieri, of the union, said the delay was voted to allow the organization to become 100 per cent strong and make victory certain.

Theater owners, in refusing to meet the union demands, said they easily could fill the places of the musicians if they left their jobs.

New Frocks for Fall

LOOKING through the notes that Dame Fashion jotted down for fall, one finds everywhere the word "FROCKS" written in capital letters. Here, it seems, she was able to give the highest expression to the fancifulness of her imagination. Here her dearest wish was realized. Her fondest dream came true.

Quite dutifully have we adhered to her mandates in making our selections—bringing to you only those things that will meet her heartiest approval. And because she approves them, you will also!

YOU have no idea how many women have selected from this group of $25.00 models and expressed keenest delight at the values. It is indeed one of the season's prize offerings. We are making every effort to make it bigger and better as the days go by. New things are coming in continually to add to its beauty and variety, and to make it at all times the expression of Fashion's newest ideas.

And from the standpoint of value, as well as of beauty, you'll find this a real treat, because the purpose back of this plan is to offer only dresses of markedly unusual quality at such low price. This is an everyday feature. See these dresses at your earliest convenience.

Betty Wales Dresses of Navy Poiret Twill at $22.75

BETTY WALES conceived the idea of producing for this season woolen dresses of styles particularly adapted to the needs of school and college girls and business women. She studied carefully various types of such girls and women and modeled the dresses with them in mind. She selected Poiret twill as the material best suited to her purposes—and navy as the most practical shade. Out of her study have come twelve distinct styles that are rare types of the Betty Wales art in dress-making. Practical and serviceable—youthful and good-looking—back of all that, the quality for which the Betty Wales label always stands. Certainly values of a very superior sort at the price quoted here.

"Korrek" Models of the Favored Woolens at $19.75 to $50.00

THE name "Korrek" tells the story of the dresses in this group—they are correct in every detail of style, fabric and workmanship. They are of the season's favored woolen fabrics, showing a strength and sturdiness of line which make for real service. This, too, coupled with genuine smartness of styling.

There are unique uses of military or fancy braiding, embroidery in self or contrasting shades, or here and there the pretty effect of a taffeta ribbon sash. There are also varied sleeve-effects to tell of Fashion's newest whims. Shades are navy, brown, tan and black. Sizes up to 44.

JOY OF HEALTH WOMAN'S RIGHT

Mrs. Evans Freed from Female Weakness by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Detroit, Michigan.—"I had female weakness with pains in my back, and I could not stand on my feet for any length of time. I was working in a factory but had to quit because I was too weak to touch my feet. A friend recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to me, and I can hardly believe it myself that I am well. Oh, it is a grand thing to have your health! I feel well all the time and can go out like other women and not feel that awful torture. When I took your medicine first I thought it should cure after the first bottle, but I am glad my husband kept me at it. I have had nine bottles and now I am well. Mrs. JENNY EVANS, 1604 Lafayette Blvd., Detroit, Michigan.

If you are suffering from displacements, irregularities, backache, nervousness or other forms of female weakness, you should take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

The reason is given in letters like these, and we have published thousands of them. You may expect that a medicine that has helped other women will help you. Try it.

Blunders

What mistake in dress has this girl made?

The answer will be found among today's want ads.

Mrs. Walter Scott Coleman, vice regent of the Joseph Habersham chapter, D. A. R., says a "city without parks means a community without freedom."

BY MARTHA GOODE ANDERSON.

Well, tomorrow is the day! If Atlanta is to have a new park, we will know by night time, after the votes have all been counted and everyone has had the chance to express his wish by vote—which is, after all, the only sort of expression which really counts.

I have asked a dozen "good women, and true," for an expression of their views as to the need for the park and bond issue, and here they are, beginning with Mrs. Walter Scott Coleman's. As everyone knows, Mrs. Coleman is first vice president of the Joseph Habersham chapter, D. A. R., and a former president of the Atlanta chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, in addition to the other important offices she has filled.

"A city without parks is a community without freedom; a city with no playgrounds or breathing spaces has a dwarfed childhood and an abnormal citizenship. A city without trees, grass or flowers is void of nature's greatest gifts, and if such blessings and conveniences are long denied the people, they will sooner or later demand these necessities from the city and its authorities. Atlanta sorely needs more breathing zones and larger pleasure grounds for her growing army of children and increasing general population.

"Business men and employees should have a central place near in for short, quick rest and as a diversion from the grind of offices and stores. Our present park facilities are woefully lacking, and we do not have time to visit these places so far from the center of our business districts. A central park is the one big need of Atlanta, and every down-town individual should go to the polls and vote for park bonds."

Need Parks and Playgrounds.

"We ought to have more parks and playgrounds for children in Atlanta," says Mrs. George Hinman, chairman of history of art of the City Federation of Women's Clubs. "I am heartily in favor of anything which will bring about a more perfect physical development of our children, future citizens, and parks are more and more needed as the city expands."

Mrs. F. J. Sprattling says: "The park will be to Atlanta what gardens and lovely lawns are to homes, giving joy to their owners and all who pass by."

Mrs. H. G. Hastings expresses herself by saying: "I think we ought to buy this property now while prices are within reach. Even if we do not improve it now we at least will have it and there is always inspiration in the thought that our city is growing beautiful as it grows older."

Mrs. Wright's Idea.

Mrs. Ransom Wright says: "I am deeply interested in the proposed central park with its proposed lake and trees and believe that its development will be carried out perfectly. The bond issue which will insure the new park should also give us the needed funds to develop those lovely parks which we already have."

Mrs. John A. Perdue, former president of the Atlanta chapter, U. D. C., says: "Atlanta needs the new park beyond question. Anything so beneficial as parks are needed where there are so many children as our city now so proudly possesses."

"I shall gladly welcome any new park which is so badly needed in our fast-growing city," says Mrs. Earle Sherwood Jackson. "I made a preliminary study two years ago of parks and playgrounds in other cities in America, and especially of those in Cleveland, O., at the time I was chairman of the civic recreation committee. I learned at that time how far behind Atlanta is in the matter of community recreation parks and playgrounds, and I welcome any opportunity which will improve our great need in this direction. I am especially hopeful that the new park will include also a supervised play place for children."

Mrs. Block Is In Favor.

Mrs. Francis Block has the following expression: "If those who have the final creation of the city's parks could only realize just what parks mean in a city, there is no question but that we would all say, not population in that part of the city where they are closest settled."

Mrs. Christian Clarke, regent of the Joseph Habersham chapter, D. A. R., says: "I am indeed in favor of the bond issue just as I am always in favor of any constructive effort which means progress for Atlanta. The new park means this."

Says Mrs. Henry Collier: "Atlanta has grown so fast we have hardly had time to consider her aesthetic development. That time has come now. In a few more years it will be too late, as we will never be able to vote a bond issue big enough to buy the land needed for a park. Let us issue bonds now and buy now."

"I am in favor of the new park, by all means," said Miss Lillian Flynn. "Its value as a constructive part of our city life is inestimable."

Mrs. Madison Bell voices her sentiment as follows: "I recently received a postal card from far away Norway. The only post office address on it was 'Atlanta.' It came to me direct. In all lines of endeavor our citizens are accomplishing wonderful things, and their home city is brought to the attention of people in every clime. Atlanta is a great southern metropolis and in the world's time light. It has progressed exceedingly beyond the fondest expectations of its most patriotic citizens. In some respects it is still in its swaddling clothes. The most glaring deficiency is its lack of parks for recreation. There are no great cities, any where, that have not realized that adequate out-door places for amusement, exercise and diversion today are useful necessities in the permanency of their municipal welfare. The coming bond election provides the citizens of Atlanta with a golden opportunity to provide a life-saving station of priceless value for the children in our midst, a source of pleasure to the old and feeble citizens and a sight to attract and entertain the sojourners to our city."

Mrs. Preston Arkwright speaks as follows: "The new park has my deepest interest and I think we should use almost any means to bring it into existence. I am heartily in favor of the bond issue for this purpose."

Mrs. Gilliam Morrow says: "I am indeed interested in the proposed park and hope that when this fine Central park is completed it means that others will be made in sections of the city where they will be of the greatest benefit. I hope that in time Atlanta will create a park for our colored

G. F. BELL ENDS LIFE

Despondency Over Ill Health Given as Reason.

G. F. Bell, secretary of the Pressman's union, who was found unconscious in his room at 288 South Ash by early Monday morning, died a few minutes afterward from the effects of carbolic acid. His cousin, Miss Vashiti Morrison, was attracted by his groans and summoned medical aid, but Bell died before physicians arrived. A coroner's jury returned a verdict of suicide.

It was believed that Mr. Bell had grown despondent over his physical condition, an operation having been performed several years ago in which a leg was amputated, and he feared further trouble, it was stated.

Mr. Bell was a member of Atlanta Webb Pressman's union No. 10, and had served for several years as secretary. He was also a member of the Labor day committee which arranged for the celebration Monday.

Mr. Bell is survived by his mother, Mrs. T. W. Dobbs; two sisters, Mrs. J. H. Henderson and Mrs. G. A. Hall, and two brothers, Thomas and Albert Dobbs.

Funeral services will be held Tuesday night in Atlanta, the body being carried Wednesday by Hunter, Blanchard, Gartrell to Cartersville for interment.

Rainey had no escort, but presented respite credentials which were granted at his request when he was sentenced some time ago to serve a year on the gang for shooting at another.

His wife was ill at the time and the respite was given in order that he might arrange domestic affairs before he began the sentence. When he appeared at the office, he announced that he was ready to begin serving the sentence.

THE GUMPS—THE NEW STENOGRAPHER

The Letter of the Contract

By Basil King

Next Week, "In the Onyx Lobby."
BY CAROLYN WELLS.

He hastened to reassure her. "Oh, Lord, no. Not in England they wouldn't be. A divorced English woman—well, she's in rather a hole, you know; whereas a divorced American woman—that's natural."

"I see," she responded slowly. "It's not considered quite so bad."

"Oh, not half so bad. One expects an American woman to be divorced—or something."

She couldn't be annoyed with him because he was so honest and ingenious.

CHAPTER XVI.

Wine, Women and Song.

Chipman Walker had never really noticed Lily until on that Sunday morning in June it suddenly struck him that she was trying to get a word with him alone.

He had seen her, of course. She had been at Mountain Brook, Emery Bland's place in New Hampshire, every time he had gone there; but, her being there being true, he had paid her no attention.

Perhaps the fact that the girl was not really the piece of either Mr. or Mrs. Bland had something to do with his tendency to treat her as a negligible quantity. Mrs. Bland had explained the situation to him during his first visit to Mountain Brook.

"Lily isn't our niece at all," she had said, in inadvertence. "She's no relation to us whatever. We don't know who she is. We got her out of an orphanage, the year we built this house. Mr. Bland seemed to think the house ought to have something young in it. It wasn't my desire to adopt a child. I simply yielded. The only stipulation I made was that she should call us uncle and aunt. I couldn't bear he called mother by a child who wasn't my own."

Chipman came to consider Bland a friend by accident—the accident of a club, where they stumbled on a common hobby in Victorian English politics. There was no subject on which Emery Bland was better informed, and Chip, who had been brought up in England, made an interesting listener. It was Bland himself who took the first step in the direction of closer friendship.

"Well, how are you getting on?" He asked the question while slipping into the seat opposite Chip as the latter lunched at the club one day.

"Oh, so so."

"H'm. So so. That's what you call it."

The tone implied exasperation.

"Well, what do you call it?"

"Oh, I'm not obliged to give it a name. I hear other people do that."

"And what do other people say?" asked Chip.

"I do. I think you ought to know. They say it's a pity."

Chip took on the defiant air of a bad boy. "They can say it—and go to blazes."

"They'll say it, all right! But I rather think that you'll do the going to blazes—at this."

Walker raised his haggard eyes. "Well, why not, when you're got nothing else?"

"Oh, rot, Walker! I'm ashamed of you. I can imagine a man of your type doing almost anything else but taking to drink."

Chipman shrugged his shoulders. "I had three resources left to me—wine, woman, and song. For song I've no ear; for woman—well, that's all over; so it came down to Hobson's choice."

"Hobson's choice he blazed! Walker chose! And you've just time enough left to cast about for a set of alternatives. Why? I've seen scores of men in your fix; and of some of them it was salvation."

"And what was it of the others?"

"Hell. But it was hell of their own making."

"All right. I'm willing to accept the word. It's a hell of my own making—but it's hell, just the same."

"But, good Lord! man, even if it is hell you don't want to wallow in it. See here, Walker, why don't you come up and spend the week-end with me in New Hampshire?"

CHAPTER XVII.

Lily.

Chip went to Mountain Brook three times that summer, and in June of the following year. It was during this last visit that Lily gave him the impression that she was seeking an opportunity to speak to him.

Throughout Saturday it had been an impression almost too faint to be recorded; but it was significant to him that on Sunday morning she didn't go to church.

She shared the house with him, therefore a fact of which he was scarcely aware till he saw her in possession of the pergola. With a book in her hand she had established herself in a chair not far from that which by preference he had made his own. She didn't keep him in suspense. She closed her novel as he approached, looking up at him with simple directness. "I've something to tell you."

Behind the attention he gave to these words he registered the observation that when she looked at her—which he had rarely done—you saw she was pretty. She was dressed simply in white linen, with a belt of "waterfall" blue silk.

Instinctively he knew that what she had to tell him must be important, but taking a casual tone, said, "Have you?"

"It's about some one you use to know. You don't mind my speaking right out, will you?"

"Of course not. Say anything you like."

"Well, I know Miss Marcia Clare."

"Good Lord!" He seemed to shrink away.

The shy serenity of her bearing was undisturbed.

"She's very ill. I think she's going to die. She thinks so herself. She wants to know if—if you'd go and see her."

It was long before he spoke. When he did so the tone of resentment was bitter. "Does she realize what she's done to me?"

"I think she does. In fact, it's the only thing she does realize very clearly now. She talks of it continually, in her dreamy way—but a way that's quite heartbreaking."

really think that if you were to see her."

He looked up under his lids and brows as she hesitated. "Well? The tone was as savage as courtesy would let him make it."

"That you'd forgive her."

"I shall never forgive her. The women deliberately wrecked my life."

"The poor thing didn't do it deliberately, Mr. Walker. She did it because she couldn't help it—because she loved you so."

He shook himself impatiently. "Ah, what kind of love is that?"

The audacity of her response—the curious audacity of shyness—seemed to him extraordinary only when, later, he thought it over. "I dare say, but isn't a very high kind of love—but there was no question of its being that—from the first. Was there?"

"The woman ruined me," he cried.

"And must she bear all the responsibility of that?"

Before Chip could begin to stammer out an explanation that would give him point of view, Lily was passing rapidly up the pathway.

CHAPTER XVIII.

When he returned to town he went to see Maggie. The wasted face and the sunken, burning eyes wrought in him a kind of terror. Luckily he was not obliged to talk, since her mind couldn't follow coherent sentences. It was enough for her to have him sit by the bed while she worked her hands vigorously toward him, saying, "Oh, Chip!" and murmuring broken things in Swedish. He was glad when she died and could be buried, so that he might consider the episode as ended—if there was ever an end to anything in this cursed life!

And yet the occurrence brought him another kind of shock. In the death of one who for years had been so closely associated with his thoughts it was as if his own death had begun. He grew uneasy, morbid, and came to hate the clubs, the restaurants, the theaters, and such social gatherings as he was now invited to. There was an evening when from sheer boredom he went home to his rooms as early as 8 o'clock—and a bottle of Old Piper came out of his hiding place.

Going to the head had the more to recommend it since he had heard that Edith was in New York. His downfall might bring her back to him, in some such way, from some such motive of saving or pity, as that by which he himself had been brought to Maggie Clare.

The argument being in favor of Old Piper, Old Piper supported it. Chip never forgot an evening when, as he staggered down the steps of the club toward the taxi that had been called for him, he met Emery Bland, who was coming up. He would have dodged the latter without recognition had it not been for the latter's kindly touch on his arm, while a voice of distress said: "Oh, poor old chap, what's this?"

With that he staggered on, knowing that he almost fell into the waiting vehicle.

Worse days ensued—for nearly a week. Worse still might have followed had they not been cut short suddenly.

They were cut short by a note which bore the signature, Lily Bland. It was a simple note, containing nothing but the request that he should come and see her.

CHAPTER XIX.

The Iron.

Lily, dressed simply, scarcely decolletee, seemed somewhat lost in the spacious Bland library. She made no pretense at preliminary social small talk, going straight to her point as soon as they were seated in the fire-light.

"Uncle Emery had something to tell you, but I asked him to let me do it," she said.

Chip's heart bounded. He knew Edith was in New York. She had heard of his condition! She was coming back to him!

He was to have his reward for taking pity on Maggie Clare.

"Then it's good news—or you wouldn't want to break it?" he said with parched tongue.

Lily was not visibly perturbed. Rather, she was pensive. "Don't you think that we often make news good or bad by our way of taking it?"

"That's asking me a question, when you've got information to give me! What have you to tell me, Miss Bland?"

"I've something to tell you that will give you a great shock; so that I don't want to say it till I know you're prepared."

"Oh, prepared! Is one ever prepared? Is one of them dead?"

"That would be a great grief. I said that this would be a great shock. There's a difference—and one can be prepared."

He flung his hands outward. "Yes, yes! I know what you're driving at. I promise. Only, for God's sake, tell me. Is it about—?"

CHAPTER XX.

"Papa Lacom."

Two things seemed strange to Chip after that evening—the one, that the fight with Old Piper was ended, and the other, that in the matter of Edith's marriage, once the immediate shock had spent its strength, he bowed to the accomplished fact with a docility he himself could not understand.

As for the fight with Old Piper, there was no longer a reason for waging it. In the new situation Old Piper had lost its appeal, from sheer inadequacy to meet the new need.

The fact of the marriage he contrived to keep at a distance. It was so monstrous that the mind refused to take it in, and if it hadn't been for the children, he might not have heard so much as the man's name.

The children called him "Papa Lacom." They spoke of him simply and spontaneously, taking "Papa Lacom" as a matter of course. They varied the appellation now and then by calling him "our other paper."

It had been intimated to him, not long after the second marriage, that he might see the children with reasonable frequency, through the good offices of Mr. and Mrs. Bland.

Why Not Save the Difference?

The biggest difference between anthracite coal and Rainbow coke is the price—a matter of nine dollars per ton. The heat units are very nearly the same.

Rainbow coke is ideal for furnaces and automatic heaters. It is clean, smokeless, and, contrary to general belief, is not more injurious to grate bars than hard or soft coal.

Try Rainbow coke for once, and you will be won over, just as many others have been.

For Convention

Paul Henderson, assistant postmaster-general, and W. H. Riddell will be the chief speakers at the twenty-sixth biennial convention of the National Railway Mail association, which opens in the Ansley hotel roof garden this morning. Mr. Riddell is superintendent of railway mail service.

Monday night hundreds of delegates had registered for the convention and every section of the country from Alaska to Maine was represented. Others are expected to reach Atlanta in the course of Tuesday.

Besides an enormous program of business which is to be discussed, the railway mail men have prepared an ambitious program of entertainment for the convention week.

Tuesday morning Mayor Walter A. Sims will welcome the visitors to Atlanta and addresses will be made by D. V. Nelson, president of the Georgia branch of the Railway Mail association; E. F. Chilton, president of the Fourth division; R. J. Harris, superintendent of the railway mail service in the Fourth division; E. K. Lutz, local postmaster, and Mrs. W. E. Ashley, president of the Atlanta auxiliary.

Monday night a big ball was given in the roof garden of the hotel. The convention proper opens Tuesday morning. The women's auxiliary will hold its biennial national convention at the same time.

School Opens Session.

Rome, Ga., September 3.—(Special.)—The new Consolidated school at Cave Spring opened its first term this morning with the first of the teachers' conference and an enrollment larger than the trustees had expected on the first day.

Informal exercises, consisting of impromptu speeches by Attorney James Maddox of the city court of Rome and Prof. C. C. Harris, of the Cave Spring School for the Deaf, marked the opening, which was attended by a large number of residents of the school district.

School Board Meets.

Rome, Ga., September 3.—(Special.)—The county board of education will hold its regular monthly meeting tomorrow at which time final preparations for the opening of the schools of the county will be made. Most of the schools open on October 1.

Increase Weevil Fight.

Rome, Ga., August 3.—(Special.)—The fight against the boll weevil increased at least 100 per cent in scope and in consistency within the past year, throughout north Georgia, according to R. E. Wiebchel, of the extension department of the state college of agriculture.

Mr. Wiebchel, who is making a tour of the northern half of the state with motion picture films showing improved farming, live stock and poultry raising, has covered the major portion of the state northward from Rome. In almost every county he has visited, he states, he finds farmers less inclined to let the weevil run in a surmountable obstacle than they were a year ago. The use of calcium arsenate in almost every section has increased several hundred per cent, says, and rapid cultivation and the gathering of fallen squares has kept pace with the poisoning.

Judged from what he has seen in north Georgia, Mr. Wiebchel feels that there is reason to believe that the state is making notable progress in its war on the weevil.

Over Supply of Labor.

Rome, Ga., September 3.—(Special.)—There is an over-supply of unskilled and semi-skilled labor in the middle west and the northwestern thousands of workmen from the south are now out of work in both sections, according to reports told by more than a dozen Georgians who recently have passed through Rome en route to their homes further south, most of them on foot, on the Nevada highway.

"Several times within the past three weeks men have been pulled from trains here and locked up charged with vagrancy. Almost every day there were 'heading south' and practically every one told the same tale.

Employed in industrial centers of the northwest or the middle west until recently, they have been 'laid off' indefinitely. No other work could be had and the searchers after a job turns his face southward and homeward, usually without more than a few dollars in his pocket.

In every case the men tell the same story—better wages than the south offers, but living expenses that leave little after these expenses have been met.
